Dr. Ward Cheats Vice Verdict With Death

But Britian's Worst Scandal To Live On

DR. STEPHEN WARD

LONDON (AP)—Dr. Stephen Ward died today, leaving a final note saying that he had taken his own life.

"It's a wish not to let them get me," he wrote. "I'd rather get myself."

The note was released by Jack Wheatley, lawyer for the playboy-osteopath who took an overdose of drugs just hours before he was convicted of two vice charges in Britain's biggest sex and political scandal of the century.

Ward never regained consciousness to be told about his conviction, but he anticipated the verdict.

His life ebbed away at 3:50 p.m. in a flower-filled but guarded room at St. Stephen's Hospital where he was rushed Wednesday suffering from a massive overdose of drugs.

GIRL FRIEND

"If he dies I'll make sure it is not in vain," she vowed.

"He is not going to die to let a whole lot of people get off scot free. If he dies I'm going to make sure their names are mentioned."

It remained to see what she would tell.

Only death enabled the 50-year-old society osteopath and artist to prevent the law running its full course.

FATAL DOSE

Ward swallowed his fatal overdose Wednesday morning—only a few hours before the final day of his trial resumed.

In his absence, the judge completed his final address and the jury of 11 men and one woman convicted Ward on two of five counts charging this slim and elegant man with operating a high society sex circus.

Only sentencing was deferred until such time as Ward was fit to appear in court.

The jury convicted him of living off the earnings of Mandy Rice-Davies, 18, and Christine Keeler, 21. They

Zellerbach Succumbs To Tumor

COMBINED AP & UPI

SAN FRANCISCO—J. D. Zellerbach, California industrialist and former U. S. ambassador to Italy, died today of a brain tumor. He was 71.

Zellerbach had undergone a three-hour operation yesterday at Mt. Zion hospital. Surgeons said the tumor proved inoperable.

Doctors said that Zellerbach had been suffering headaches and minor discomforts for the past few weeks, but there was no indication of the gravity of his illness prior to Thursday night.

The operation was performed to relieve pressure on the brain. Dr. John Sampson said the executive had been stricken with a tumor in the middle part of the brain.

The suddenness of the attack came as a shock to Zellerbach's family. His wife was under sedation at the family home. His brother, Harold Zellerbach, rushed home from British Columbia, where he had been vacationing.

Zellerbach, long a major figure in Bay Area affairs, was director and chairman of the board of the Crown Zellerbach Corp. here as well as director of several banks and other business firms.

He was also president of the San Francisco Symphony Assn.

Rusk In Moscow With High Hopes

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk arrived in Moscow today with a declaration that the United States is determined to follow up the signing of the nuclear test ban treaty Monday with other steps to ensure peace.

"This could be the turning point in the affairs of mankind," he said.

Foreign Secretary Andrei A. Gromyko, who will sign the treaty for the Soviet Union, said "it would be good if this could be the starting point for big events."

"I hope it will be," he said.

Rounding out the Big Three group, British Foreign Secretary Lord Home arrived from London. He hinted to London reporters before taking off that dealings of the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union eventually may lead to a summit conference.

Gromyko welcomed Rusk and a party of top Washington administration officials and six U.S. senators on their arrival in a U.S. Air Force jet passenger plane at Moscow's Vnukovo Airport.

In his arrival speech, Rusk said the government and people of the United States are determined to seek other steps to ensure peace.

Many Governors Want To Bar Discrimination In Public Spots

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Many of the nation's governors want Congress to pass a law barring racial discrimination in motels, hotels, theaters, restaurants and other public facilities, a congressional poll revealed today.

And those who are the chief executives of states which already have public accommodations laws said they are effective, although some discrimination persists.

The Senate Commerce Committee which has just completed five weeks of hearings on President John F. Kennedy's public accommodations proposal, asked the 50 governors to comment.

Six governors testified in person and 21 others replied by letter. Of this number, 14 endorsed the president's program, eight were non-committal. Five others, all from the South, registered strong dissents.

Twelve of the governors come from states with public accommodations laws, several of them dating back to the latter part of the 19th Century.

They were unanimous in telling the Congress that such enforceable laws help break down racial barriers and in some cases lead to a lessening of discrimination in other areas, such as housing.

They also made these other points:

Most breaches of a public accommodations law can be settled by conciliation.

Many complaints of discrimination are found to be unjustified.

Negroes are reluctant to file complaints because of lack of time, trouble involved, legal expenses, and sometimes the failure of local prosecutors to act.

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, who led a drive for a civil rights resolution at the recent governors' conference at Miami Beach, wrote that removal of discrimination in public accommodations led to greater mutual understanding and "in turn, made it easier to achieve advances in eliminating discrimination in other fields, such as housing." He added that there was an increase in business because Negroes started making more use of facilities.

Police, Clergy Put Curb On Chicago Race Violence

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tough policemen and peace-making clergymen worked in tandem today to curb the violence of Chicago's worst racial outbreak of the decade.

There were guarded hopes that the bitterness and turmoil which has torn a South Side neighborhood for five consecutive nights was easing.

Angry crowds of adults and teen-agers, some wearing swastika bands, milled again last night through the West Englewood neighborhood where whites have protested with bricks and jeers against the move-in of three Negro families.

Forty-seven persons were arrested, bringing the total for the week to 180. The crowds were sullen, but smaller. Police had feared the night would be the worst of the week. Instead, crowds had no time to gather as motorcycle officers roared down sidewalks and demonstrators were hustled into paddy wagons at the first sign of trouble.

Edward Marciniak, director of the Chicago Commission on Human Relations, credited much of the change in atmosphere to 30 clergymen of the Roman Catholic and Protestant faiths who roamed the area yesterday and last night pleading for tolerance and exhorting community leaders to work for racial peace.

Big Traffic Tie-Up On Highway 101

Two collisions and a heavy flow of weekend traffic, swelled by today's opening of deer hunting season, combined to cause traffic tie-ups along Highway 101 at quitting time yesterday.

Traffic in the San Rafael area was backed up to Corte Madera after a two-car collision on Highway 101, south of the San Rafael overpass at 4:30 p. m.

A car being towed by a car driven by George Henry Guy, 69, of 845 Las Gallinas Avenue, Santa Venetia, collided with a car driven by Bruce Hills Ersheg, 21, of 715 Sun Lane, Novato, the California Highway Patrol reported.

A two-car collision on Highway 101 near the main gate of the Hamilton Air Force Base at 5 p.m. tied up northbound traffic as far back as Puerto Suello hill.

A car driven by Frances V. Allgrove, 28, of Redwood City, collided with a car driven by Alexander Azinov, 64, of San Francisco, at the merging lanes, the CHP reported.

Azinov and Olga Azinov, 63, of San Francisco, suffered minor injuries and were treated by a private physician.

Coolidge Sworn In 40 Years Ago

PLYMOUTH, Vt. (UPI) — The most unusual presidential inauguration ceremony in the nation's history took place in this quiet hamlet 40 years ago today.

Calvin Coolidge became the 30th president of the United States in a brief ceremony at 2:47 a.m. witnessed by only a handful of persons.

Coolidge, then the vice president, was sworn in by his father, Col. John Coolidge, shortly after word was received that President Warren G. Harding had died in San Francisco.

Girl Finds $5 All Aglitter In Field Of Litter

Twenty Junior Fire Marshals on their first clean-up project in Marinwood today worked so fast that the papers, weeds and other trash adjacent to the Marinwood Shopping Center literally flew.

They had a good incentive. At the start of the clean-up, Linda Cameron, 12, found a $5 bill in the trash.

Fire Capt. James Cameron, organizer of the Junior Fire Marshals, swore that he did not plant the bill as an incentive. It was just a happy coincidence that the finder happened to be his daughter.

U.N. Command Warns Reds In North Korea

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — Amid reports of new fighting on the uneasy Korean truce line, the U.N. Command warned today that Communist North Korea must curb its "bloodthirsty marauders" immediately or it will invite its own destruction.

Maj. Gen. George H. Cloud, senior delegate from the U.N. Command on the armistice commission, charged the North Koreans with deliberate, malicious assaults in UN.-controlled territory which have killed three Americans and wounded a fourth since July 29.

North Korea brushed aside the charges as "fabrications" in one of the hottest exchanges in 10 years of armistice commission meetings.

Earlier Cloud said Communist troops had intruded into the U.N. Command portion of the demilitarized zone at 4:30 a.m. today and fresh firing had broken out between American and Communist troops.

Cloud said the clash had taken place about 500 yards south of the military demarcation line running through the center of the demilitarized zone. He did not elaborate and mentioned no casualties.

An American officer told newsmen outside the armistice meeting that he had thrown

La Farge

The nationally-known writer, an ardent and vociferous fighter for the cause of the Indian, won the Pulitzer Prize in 1929 for "Laughing Boy," a story of the Navajo Indian life.

He was born in New York City, Dec. 19, 1901, the son of Christopher Grant La Farge, an architect. The author was named for his noted ancestor, Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry and his full name was Oliver Hazard Perry La Farge.

The slim, dark-haired author attended Harvard University, where he edited the "Lampoon," and was graduated in 1924.

Ex-Admiral Says Ship Sinking

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A radio message from retired Navy Vice Admiral Harold F. Bogan of La Jolla said last night he and his crew of the yacht Freedom II abandoned it because it was in sinking condition from rough-weather damage.

They are due to reach San Diego tonight in the Navy submarine Razorback, that picked them up after they had tossed on the ocean in a runabout launch for 11 hours.

The Navy said a count of names it has released shows seven were rescued—Bogan and first mate Bill Stach and five college students.

Civil Rights Hearings End

WASHINGTON (AP)—President John F. Kennedy's civil rights program has passed the first turn in the long, winding road toward enactment—completion of lengthy hearings by two congressional committees.

The committees are expected to start writing their bills soon.

The prospect in the House is that the floor battle over civil rights legislation won't be joined until after Labor Day. The outlook in the Senate is even cloudier.

'Accept Some Radioactivity'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assembly minority leader Charles Conrad (R-Sherman Oaks) says the United States should be "ready to accept a small amount of radiation to preserve . . . the free world."

Conrad made the statement yesterday while expressing concern that President John F. Kennedy has not shown that atmospheric nuclear fallout is a real danger to mankind, but urges support of a test ban treaty.

He said animals exposed to radiation from atomic test blasts in Nevada have been studied for several years, and the president should have announced any ill effects.

Haiti Mission Closing

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Agency for International Development is closing down its mission in Haiti.

"The action culminates the phasing out of aid programs and services over the past year," a formal announcement said.

The statement added that because of "the abiding interest of the United States in the welfare of the island's people," the agency will continue to support a malaria eradication project and a Food for Peace program under which food is given many nations, especially for many children.

Turncoat's Back Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lowell D. Skinner, an American prisoner of war who remained in Communist China after the Korean War, will have some back pay coming when he returns to the United States even though he was given a dishonorable discharge in 1954.

The army gave this word yesterday as Skinner, 32, of Akron, Ohio, arrtved in Hong Kong on his way home. He said he decided to return to the United States because of a lack of freedom in China.

At the State Department, press officer Robert J. McCloskey said Skinner is free to return and that his citizenship was not affected by his dishonorable discharge. The Justice Department said the question of whether Skinner is liable for prosecution would be examined.

Astronaut Speeds

ORLANDO, Fla (AP) — Astronaut Virgil I. Gus Grissom, who received the nation's praise for the Mercury flight in which his space capsule went more than 5,000 mph, is being prosecuted for going 75 mph.

A state highway patrolman said he clocked Grissom at that speed for two miles before stopping him July 27. Last November, Grissom was arrested and fined $20 for speeding in another Florida county.

Kennedy Golfing

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—President John F. Kennedy settled today into a summertime swing of golf and water sports at picturesque Cape Cod.

He didn't wait long to get started on a few holes of golf after flying up from Washington yesterday, even though a heavy rainstorm had just swept the area.

Aides said Kennedy hopes to get in more golf and a cruise on Nantucket Sound today, plus whatever odds and ends of official business need attention from the man who never completely escapes from his job.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Arlene, the first of the season, whipped the tropical Atlantic with winds of 100 miles an hours today, but caused little damage.

She was 925 miles east-southeast of San Juan, P.R., a safe distance from densely inhabited islands and heavily traveled shipping lanes.

One small craft reported itself in trouble north of Puerto Rico, but at last check she was being escorted to port by a Coast Guard vessel.

Good Day For Blood Bank Here

The Marin Blood Center is having trouble recruiting donors this summer, but Wednesday a volunteer recruiter at the center was rewarded with seven donations resulting from one telephone call.

The recruiter called Lawrence Mayer, chairman of the Mill Valley Rotary Club Reserve Fund, and explained to him the critical need for fresh blood for a scheduled open heart surgery. Mayer not only came in Wednesday morning to donate a pint of blood, he also brought two other Mill Valley Rotarians with him. When he realized how few people have responded this summer to the need for blood donations, he telephoned two other club members and they came in that afternoon to donate a pint each.

Mayer still wasn't through. Before the afternoon was over, he had enlisted two more donors, who responded yesterday with their donations.

Man Pleads Guilty To Shooting Spree

Richard Ohberg, whose shooting spree inside the office of Engineered Control Systems Corp. in Sausalito Sunday brought out a bevy of policemen, pleaded guilty yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to disturbing the peace.

A charge of resisting arrest was dropped. Judge Harold J. Haley sentenced Ohberg, 48, of Oakland, to a 30 day suspended sentence on condition he serve 10 days, including the six he has already spent in jail. He was placed on six months probation and fined $52.50.

Mill Valley Police Use Ruse To Nab Suspect

A 26-year-old Oregon student with a police record of rape, desertion and taking drugs into a county jail was re-arrested Thursday night on a ruse by Mill Valley police.

Jerry Eugene Anderson of Wilsonville, Ore., was booked into county jail on a charge of transporting stolen goods into the state, but the charge was later dropped when the U.S. Marshal placed a hold on him for transporting a stolen car across a state line.

Yesterday he admitted to Police Chief Dan Terzich that he stole the 1958 Corvette from Jerry Burns of Portland.

Terzich said Anderson, arrested by Officer John Castellani Wednesday night for being without an operator's license and for improper display of a license plate, bailed out of jail Thursday.

During the day police learned of his prior record, which included two years spent in prison. Mountain View police have a hold on Anderson, Terzich said, for failure to appear after an auto accident.

Anderson telephoned police during the afternoon to ask the towing charge for the Corvette, which had been impounded in Mill Valley after his arrest.

"I told him inasmuch as he had been arrested and bailed out that there would be no charge, but that he needed a release from me," said Terzich. Anderson went to the police station 20 minutes later and was promptly clapped back in jail.

Yesterday in Marin Municipal Court the two driving violations were dismissed as county authorities prepared to turn the man over to federal officials.

$100,000 Suit Filed In Crash

A Sausalito man, one of four persons injured July 24 in a head-on auto crash near the Golden Gate Bridge, filed a $100,000 personal injury suit in Marin County Superior Court yesterday against the driver of the other car.

Stephen E. Tise, 22, of 30A Crescent Avenue, Sausalito, claimed Clifford E. Clark, 45, of San Francisco, was negligent when his car met Tise's sports-car head-on on the Sausalito underpass.

Clark was unhurt, but his wife and two children were treated for cuts. Tise was admitted to Marin General Hospital.

Gets Probation For Credit Cards

Wayne H. Ruport, 20, arrested for using a stolen credit card, pleaded guilty to the charge yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

Judge Harold J. Haley gave him a 30-day suspended sentence and placed him on probation for a year. The judge also ordered restitution for all goods bought with the credit card.

Ruport was arrested Wednesday when found driving along Shoreline Highway at 1 a.m. with one flat tire

Author Oliver La Farge Dies

La Farge

The nationally-known writer, an ardent and vociferous fighter for the cause of the Indian, won the Pulitzer Prize in 1929 for "Laughing Boy," a story of the Navajo Indian life.

He was born in New York City, Dec. 19, 1901, the son of Christopher Grant La Farge, an architect. The author was named for his noted ancestor, Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry and his full name was Oliver Hazard Perry La Farge.

The slim, dark-haired author attended Harvard University, where he edited the "Lampoon," and was graduated in 1924.

Ex-Admiral Says Ship Sinking

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A radio message from retired Navy Vice Admiral Harold F. Bogan of La Jolla said last night he and his crew of the yacht Freedom II abandoned it because it was in sinking condition from rough-weather damage.

They are due to reach San Diego tonight in the Navy submarine Razorback, that picked them up after they had tossed on the ocean in a runabout launch for 11 hours.

The Navy said a count of names it has released shows seven were rescued—Bogan and first mate Bill Stach and five college students.

The committees are expected to start writing their bills soon.

The prospect in the House is that the floor battle over civil rights legislation won't be joined until after Labor Day. The outlook in the Senate is even cloudier.

WARD

were party girls who traveled in high levels of society.

Miss Keeler, long a friend of Ward, testified against him about her liaison with John D. Profumo, who resigned as minister of war because of the scandal. Ward introduced them.

Ward spent his last days in a private hospital room watched night and day by a prison officer. He never recovered consciousness.

Soon after admission, he contracted bronchial pneumonia. Surgeons performed an operation on his throat to aid his breathing. He was aided to the end by a breathing apparatus attached by tubes to the incision in this throat.

Then yesterday, his heart weakened. An hour before his death the hospital announced he was "slowly dying."

Only one member of his family was with him when he died —a brother, Peter. Nurses and a doctor were also in the sick room, brightened by blooms of carnations and red roses.

The governor of Brixton Prison—Ward's official guardian after cancellation of his 3,000 pounds ($8,400) bail was speedily informed.

A hospital spokesman said: "We are disappointed rather than sad at not being able to keep him alive. We are always disappointed when we lose a patient."

The spokesman said there would be an inquest.

Ward had traveled in high circles, called such prominent persons as Lord Astor and Douglas Fairbanks Jr., his friends, claimed Sir Winston Churchill and others as his patients.

Miss Rice-Davies testified she had sexual relations with Astor and Fairbanks. Both denied it.

It was at Astor's estate that Ward introduced Profumo to Miss Keeler in 1961. Ward also introduced Miss Keeler to Capt. Yevgeny Ivanov, a naval attache at the Soviet Embassy.

It was the fact that she was carrying on with the war minister and the Russian at the same time that raised questions of security. And the revelation of hijinks in high places almost toppled Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's government.

Ward, the son of a well-to-do Church of England minister, went in his early 20s to the United States where he studied at the Kirksville College of Osteopathy in Missouri.

Graduating in 1938, he returned to England to serve in the British army—first as an enlisted man and later as a lieutenant in the Royal Army Medical Corps. After World War II he opened a consulting room in London's fashionable West End. He quickly became a lion of high society.

2nd House Vacated— Water Tiff

Lars E. Benson of 156 Maestro Road, Novato, has complied with the North Marin Water District's demand that he vacate his second house on Maestro Road or have his water shut off.

Eugene Chruchill, the district's office manager, said Benson's property was inspected yesterday and found empty. A fellow employee of Benson's had been occupying the second house.

Water pipes in Benson's second house were hooked into the meter on his first house, and district regulations say that's illegal. Each house must have its own meter.

Arnold Heise, chairman of the district board, charged a month ago that Benson merely was trying to see if the district enforces its regulations, but Benson today denied the charge.

"I had my foundation done and the plumbing in before they told me about the regulation. They told me to put up $3,000 for extending the water main or get out," he said. "That's pretty tough for a man who just has a new house. It's not right that somebody can come in and step on you like that."

The Bolinas Public Utility District board decided to send out specifications for a survey to determine the location and cost of a sewage disposal plant.

The Bolinas Beach Public Utilities District board took no action on a feasibility study, reported Mrs. Dorothy Paul, secretary. The main hindrance, she said, was the cost of a survey with the possibility of only one other district participating.

Who Can Jail Percy Herman?

Who will, or can, legally arrest former Tiburon resident Percy Herman, involved in an alleged international swindle which started in Rio de Janeiro and ended in Hong Kong, remained up in the air today.

However, Brazilian police have asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation to arrest Herman, who lived last year at 56 Reed Ranch Road, and three associates. The FBI says it can not act without a federal warrant.

Participating in the $365,000 diamond, stock and cash deal with Herman were Bernard Eugene de Senan, Hal Fenton and Ray Finney Harris, according to Brazilian police.

Two Mill Valley Couples Feted At Farewell Parties

The David Reeds and C. Lyle Cumminses, two popular young couples in Mill Valley, are saying good-bye to friends and are being feted at farewell parties.

Lyle and Jeanne Cummins, who have lived in Mill Valley seven years, and their children, Diana, Karen and Matthew, will live in West Hartford, Conn. Lyle has a new job there as senior product engineer in the design and development department of an engine retarder division of the Jacobs Manufacturing Co.

He has been employed with his father in work on Diesel engine devices in Sausalito.

ON AUG. 6 JEANNE and the children will fly East and Lyle will drive.

On Aug. 17 David and Ethelee and their four children, Becca, Sally, Randy and Matthew, will leave for New York City. David will begin work on a doctorate degree in sacred music at the Union Theological Seminary in preparation for becoming a minister of music.

Ethelee will be teaching music in Hartsdale Elementary schools. Residents of Mill Valley for eight years, the couple taught music in Mill Valley schools. David has been director of music for the elementary school didstrict in Mill Valley and his wife has taught singing in the schools.

BOTH THE REEDS and Cumminses have been leaders in the Mill Valley Community Church, where David has been in charge of music. Ethelee and Jeanne, sopranos, have been heard in many church programs and concerts in solos and duets.

The Reeds expect to be in the East about three years and expect to return to live in Mill Valley, since David hopes to find a position in the Bay Area.

Raw Silk Is A Fabric That Is Too Beautiful Not To Use

By EUNICE FARMER

"I am making a jacket-dress of raw silk, and even after soaking the material in hot water to shrink it, it still has a peculiar odor. It would stop me from ever using raw silk again unless you can come up with a solution."

Dear Mrs. G. S.:

Unfortunately, this is common in certain types of raw silk, and to my knowledge, there is nothing that can be done about it. The most encouraging part of it is that this odor usually is noticeable only when the garment is damp, such as when you washed it, or when you steam press it. I haven't noticed it when the garment has been completed or when being worn. If anybody has any suggestions, perhaps you would send them to us because this fabric is much too beautiful not to use.

"A neat trick to keep blousetails tucked in for that neat look! Make small loops of narrow braid, tape, or shoestrings, and sew these to the inside of the skirt waistband. Usually four will be enough, two in the front and two in the back spaced on each side of the center front and back at the approximate place of the darts on the blouse.

"Sew the small button at the corresponding place on the blouse. If possible, sew the buttons on the darts, if not, be sure to place a small piece of tape or fabric under your blouse for added reinforcement. For growing girls, it's so easy to lower the buttons."

Mrs. Lyle Cary, Hamilton, Indiana is this week's winner of a taylor trix pressing board.

Mrs. O. C. says: "Worn leather purses make perfect slipper-soles for children. Make the tops knitted, crocheted or of fabric."

Mrs. M. M.

Dear Mrs. M. M.:

Actually, the skirt lengths are the same as they have been this year, just below the knees (or wherever they look the best on the individual). However, since good design means pleasing proportions, the new longer jacket suits are being shown with skirts about one inch longer for balance.

"No matter what I do to a pleat in the back of my skirts, they always rip out or tear. Can anything be done about this?" Mrs. C. A.

Dear Mrs. C. A.:

Perhaps the pleat should be slightly longer if you are exceptionally active. One helpful suggestion would be to place a piece of hem tape where the stitching will end at the beginning of your pleat. As you stitch the seam, you will stitch through the tape as well just at the point where you have the extra strain. This will probably keep the skirt from tearing in most cases.

Moulding A Career In Glass Production

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

HOVMANTORP, Sweden — Mrs. Eric Stromberg, a slim blonde mother of four, has moulded herself a career in the man's world of glass production.

Mrs. Stromberg is the only women boss of a glassworks in Sweden, a country known in part for its fine crystal. She also is the firm's chief designer.

Hers is a factory in a rustic setting, with woodland all around. And Hovmantorp is a mere dot on the map, but it is in the heart of the glassworks "belt" of southeast Sweden where 40 of the 46 factories in the country are located.

MRS. STROMBERG'S factory is a small one compared with some of the other producers. She employs 70 persons, and many others in the area have 200, 300 and 400. But she's established a reputation for hand-blown decorative glassware and examples are at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, and the National Museum in Stockholm.

She gives the credit to her craftsmen, one of whom for 55 years has been a master blower with the company, which her father-in-law founded in 1876. Another has worked for 45 years as a blower.

"THE FURNACE is the heart of glass," she said. "It is from here that all—blower, engraver, designer—must work."

Furnaces fired by wood melt a mixture of sand, potash, lead, plus a metal oxide if color is desired, to a liquid registering 2,300 to 2,400 degrees Fahrenheit. At this molten stage, the technicians then begin the blowing and shaping process.

Mrs. Stromberg said that her crystal is faintly silver blue and the hint of a tint comes from a formula worked out through the years and not shared with her competitors.

ASTA STROMBERG talked to a group of reporters from the United States, Canada, Brazil and several western European countries who were on a two-week tour of Scandinavia.

Mrs. Stromberg said her career in glass began with her marriage. "I had studied some art," she said, "but it was my father-in-law who took me into the factory from the earliest days here."

HE WAS Edward Stromberg, known in the industry as "the grand old man of glass," she said. His wife, Garda, was a well-known designer and until her death also worked closely with her daughter-in-law.

When Edward Stromberg died, his son, Eric, who was trained as an engineer and chemist, took over. Eric Stromberg died suddenly in 1960, and now his widow carries on as managing director.

THERE ARE FOUR Stromberg children — three daughters, 23, 21 and 20, and a son, 18. The 45-year-old widow said she hoped her son would be the third generation of Strombergs in glass.

She displayed with pride a pair of sculptured horses, each measuring less than 12 inches in length. But each, she said, took the master cutter 300 hours to shape. The price of each—$4,000.

MRS. ERIC STROMBERG, owner of a glassworks in Sweden, displays some of her company's products. She has established a reputation for hand-blown decorative glassware.

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

Heynemanns To Entertain Many Distinguished People

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Heynemann will welcome long time friends, many of whom recently returned from travels to far away places at a party tonight at their home. The Heynemann family is one of the pioneer clans of Belvedere and the Belvedere home of James and Kitty is filled with pieces of art they have brought back from all parts of the world.

Their home has been the setting for many parties, mostly musicals, as James recently celebrated his fortieth anniversary as a concert manager. The Heynemanns will be assisted in entertaining tonight by their son, Jim, who will be a senior at the University of San Francisco, and their daughter, Ruth (Patty), who will be a junior at Katharine Branson School.

Tonight's guest list includes Admiral and Mrs. Chester Nimitz, Admiral and Mrs. Frank Beatty, Senator and Mrs. Jack McCarthy, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Bowie, Doctor and Mrs. Wallace Hall, Judge and Mrs. Richard Sims, Mr. and Mrs. Woodward Malone (the name brings back memories of the Woodward Gardens in San Francisco, founded by Mr. Malone's grandfather), Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper (he is an internationally known pianist and a former classmate of Mr. Heynemann), Messrs. and Mesdames Henry Tomasini, John Wiley, Eugene Payne, Sidney Clark, Eugene Byrnes, Dwayne Young, Gerald Misner, Richard MacLaury, Mrs. Natalia Dobbins whose husband was a prominent engineer in China, Mrs. Rose Sherman, Mrs. Laura Curry Sargeant, General George Slinkey, who assisted General Douglas MacArthur when the peace treaty with Japan was signed, and Charles Tjerina.

Tomorrow Mr. Heynemann will participate in the chess festival held annually in the plaza in Sonoma. Chess is another hobby of the Belvedere resident, who has missed only one of the chess competitions since the festival was started many years ago.

COMMANDER AND MRS. HENRY (HANK) TRANSUE of Kentfield are leaving for Melbourne, Australia. He is with Bechtel Corporation and is flying down under tomorrow. His wife, their son and two daughters will go by ship to Australia. The Transues are renting their Marin house and hope to return here in two years.

WELL, SO LONG FOR NOW. I'm leaving for a week's vacation. I'm not going away but will enjoy my garden, now in the height of bloom, and the cool of my redwood grove. I plan to do many of the things I wanted to do all year. I want to take another two weeks off during the winter, go to Mexico. It will be wonderful marchar se and to say manana.

A FAMILY REUNION and barbecue will be held at the Kentfield home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilhelm Tuesday. Co-host and co-hostess with the Wilhelms will be her sister, Mrs. William (Margaret) Zimmerman and her husband. Among those in the family group will be Mrs. Wilhelm's and Margaret's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young of Oakland, their daughter, Mrs. Eugene Zumwalt of Arlington, Va., whose husband is with the Department of Interior (she and her husband were for some time in Alaska), the Zumwalt's son, Robert Zumwalt and his wife. They returned recently from Guam where he served two years with the Navy. He is an architect and he and his wife, who have an eight months old daughter, Karen, are living in San Rafael and he is associated with a local firm of architects.

MR. AND MRS. ADRIAN MALONE (Joan Skewes-Cox) who divide their time between their home in San Anselmo and their ranch near Jackson, Wyo., will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary at their ranch home Aug. 11. Joan and Adrian were married at St. Raphael's Church. Monsignor Charles Ramm officiated at the marriage which was followed by a reception for several hundred guests at the Ross home of Joan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Skewes-Cox. Among those going to Wyoming for the anniversary celebration are Joan's brother, Martin Skewes-Cox and his wife of San Francisco who have a home in Stinson Beach. Unable to attend will be the Malones' daughter, Mrs. Robert L. Woodward Jr. of San Anselmo and her husband. With the Malones are their three younger children, Sara, Nicholas and Gillian. On their way home Martin and his wife will visit in Colorado Springs with her brother, Arthur Bergin Dunne Jr. and his wife.

Newcomer To Marin Heads Tamalpais Y-Wives Chapter

She and her husband, a computer programmer with Mutual United Grocers in Richmond, and their two-year-old daughter, Marla, have lived in Mill Valley six months. Mrs. Parada is finding the Y-Wives an excellent way to get acquainted and enjoy interesting programs, projects and social events.

She has recently started "a musical nursery school" in her home, where she is specializing in teaching music to five and six year old children.

"My purpose is to give intensive training in sight reading and ear training to prepare children for later study in music," she said.

A native of Oakland, Adela grew up in Ben Lomond in the Santa Cruz mountains. She began designing and selling children's clothes at the age of 15.

"I sold my dresses in two stores in Santa Cruz," she said. "After high school I studied dress designing at the Louise Salinger School of Dress Design and Arts and Fashions School in San Francisco, and in the evenings I studied business.

"Later I opened my own designing studio, doing custom dress making and designing, but I gave this up when Marla was born."

Mrs. Parada also has taken up crafts, gardening and interior decoration. In San Francisco she taught crafts and sewing to crippled and handicapped children in hospitals, and previously for three years she was in charge of dances for teen-agers in the Santa Cruz mountains.

She likes to travel, and she and her husband, a native of Guatemala, enjoyed driving there after their marriage. At the age of 18 she rode a bicycle alone from Donner summit to Carmel.

"The chapter is planning a puppet demonstration on Aug. 23," she said, "and there will be a baby beauty contest in September. Membership is open to any woman in Marin county. Visitors are welcome at any of our meetings held in my home during the summer, and in the fall we will again meet in Hammond Hall of the Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley."

MRS. LUIS F. PARADA

Other new officers serving with Mrs. Parada will be Mrs. Kenneth N. Ross of San Rafael, vice president; and Mrs. Kenneth W. Raymond of Mill Valley, secretary-treasurer.

SCRIBBLE SCARF

Latest teen girl topper fashion is an autograph kerchief that may catch on with the teen-age set like the hula hoop. Called the Scribble Scarf, and worn over the head or around the neck, it carries its own hitch-hiking indelible ball point pen for collecting on the scarf autographs, special names, dates and other teen-age chatter data that won't wash out.

Moulding A Career In Glass Production

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

HOVMANTORP, Sweden — Mrs. Eric Stromberg, a slim blonde mother of four, has moulded herself a career in the man's world of glass production.

Mrs. Stromberg is the only women boss of a glassworks in Sweden, a country known in part for its fine crystal. She also is the firm's chief designer.

Hers is a factory in a rustic setting, with woodland all around. And Hovmantorp is a mere dot on the map, but it is in the heart of the glassworks "belt" of southeast Sweden where 40 of the 46 factories in the country are located.

MRS. STROMBERG'S factory is a small one compared with some of the other producers. She employs 70 persons, and many others in the area have 200, 300 and 400. But she's established a reputation for hand-blown decorative glassware and examples are at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, and the National Museum in Stockholm.

She gives the credit to her craftsmen, one of whom for 55 years has been a master blower with the company, which her father-in-law founded in 1876. Another has worked for 45 years as a blower.

"THE FURNACE is the heart of glass," she said. "It is from here that all—blower, engraver, designer—must work."

Furnaces fired by wood melt a mixture of sand, potash, lead, plus a metal oxide if color is desired, to a liquid registering 2,300 to 2,400 degrees Fahrenheit. At this molten stage, the technicians then begin the blowing and shaping process.

Mrs. Stromberg said that her crystal is faintly silver blue and the hint of a tint comes from a formula worked out through the years and not shared with her competitors.

ASTA STROMBERG talked to a group of reporters from the United States, Canada, Brazil and several western European countries who were on a two-week tour of Scandinavia.

Mrs. Stromberg said her career in glass began with her marriage. "I had studied some art," she said, "but it was my father-in-law who took me into the factory from the earliest days here."

HE WAS Edward Stromberg, known in the industry as "the grand old man of glass," she said. His wife, Garda, was a well-known designer and until her death also worked closely with her daughter-in-law.

When Edward Stromberg died, his son, Eric, who was trained as an engineer and chemist, took over. Eric Stromberg died suddenly in 1960, and now his widow carries on as managing director.

THERE ARE FOUR Stromberg children — three daughters, 23, 21 and 20, and a son, 18. The 45-year-old widow said she hoped her son would be the third generation of Strombergs in glass.

She displayed with pride a pair of sculptured horses, each measuring less than 12 inches in length. But each, she said, took the master cutter 300 hours to shape. The price of each—$4,000.

MRS. ERIC STROMBERG, owner of a glassworks in Sweden, displays some of her company's products. She has established a reputation for hand-blown decorative glassware.

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

Heynemanns To Entertain Many Distinguished People

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Heynemann will welcome long time friends, many of whom recently returned from travels to far away places at a party tonight at their home. The Heynemann family is one of the pioneer clans of Belvedere and the Belvedere home of James and Kitty is filled with pieces of art they have brought back from all parts of the world.

Their home has been the setting for many parties, mostly musicals, as James recently celebrated his fortieth anniversary as a concert manager. The Heynemanns will be assisted in entertaining tonight by their son, Jim, who will be a senior at the University of San Francisco, and their daughter, Ruth (Patty), who will be a junior at Katharine Branson School.

Tonight's guest list includes Admiral and Mrs. Chester Nimitz, Admiral and Mrs. Frank Beatty, Senator and Mrs. Jack McCarthy, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Bowie, Doctor and Mrs. Wallace Hall, Judge and Mrs. Richard Sims, Mr. and Mrs. Woodward Malone (the name brings back memories of the Woodward Gardens in San Francisco, founded by Mr. Malone's grandfather), Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper (he is an internationally known pianist and a former classmate of Mr. Heynemann), Messrs. and Mesdames Henry Tomasini, John Wiley, Eugene Payne, Sidney Clark, Eugene Byrnes, Dwayne Young, Gerald Misner, Richard MacLaury, Mrs. Natalia Dobbins whose husband was a prominent engineer in China, Mrs. Rose Sherman, Mrs. Laura Curry Sargeant, General George Slinkey, who assisted General Douglas MacArthur when the peace treaty with Japan was signed, and Charles Tjerina.

Tomorrow Mr. Heynemann will participate in the chess festival held annually in the plaza in Sonoma. Chess is another hobby of the Belvedere resident, who has missed only one of the chess competitions since the festival was started many years ago.

COMMANDER AND MRS. HENRY (HANK) TRANSUE of Kentfield are leaving for Melbourne, Australia. He is with Bechtel Corporation and is flying down under tomorrow. His wife, their son and two daughters will go by ship to Australia. The Transues are renting their Marin house and hope to return here in two years.

WELL, SO LONG FOR NOW. I'm leaving for a week's vacation. I'm not going away but will enjoy my garden, now in the height of bloom, and the cool of my redwood grove. I plan to do many of the things I wanted to do all year. I want to take another two weeks off during the winter, go to Mexico. It will be wonderful marchar se and to say manana.

A FAMILY REUNION and barbecue will be held at the Kentfield home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilhelm Tuesday. Co-host and co-hostess with the Wilhelms will be her sister, Mrs. William (Margaret) Zimmerman and her husband. Among those in the family group will be Mrs. Wilhelm's and Margaret's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young of Oakland, their daughter, Mrs. Eugene Zumwalt of Arlington, Va., whose husband is with the Department of Interior (she and her husband were for some time in Alaska), the Zumwalt's son, Robert Zumwalt and his wife. They returned recently from Guam where he served two years with the Navy. He is an architect and he and his wife, who have an eight months old daughter, Karen, are living in San Rafael and he is associated with a local firm of architects.

MR. AND MRS. ADRIAN MALONE (Joan Skewes-Cox) who divide their time between their home in San Anselmo and their ranch near Jackson, Wyo., will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary at their ranch home Aug. 11. Joan and Adrian were married at St. Raphael's Church. Monsignor Charles Ramm officiated at the marriage which was followed by a reception for several hundred guests at the Ross home of Joan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Skewes-Cox. Among those going to Wyoming for the anniversary celebration are Joan's brother, Martin Skewes-Cox and his wife of San Francisco who have a home in Stinson Beach. Unable to attend will be the Malones' daughter, Mrs. Robert L. Woodward Jr. of San Anselmo and her husband. With the Malones are their three younger children, Sara, Nicholas and Gillian. On their way home Martin and his wife will visit in Colorado Springs with her brother, Arthur Bergin Dunne Jr. and his wife.

Marin Women

A newcomer to Marin is Mrs. Luis F. Parada of Mill Valley, new president of Mill Valley's Tamalpais Chapter of Y-Wives.

She and her husband, a computer programmer with Mutual United Grocers in Richmond, and their two-year-old daughter, Marla, have lived in Mill Valley six months. Mrs. Parada is finding the Y-Wives an excellent way to get acquainted and enjoy interesting programs, projects and social events.

Adela's favorite interests of sewing and music have resulted in some unusual accomplishments and occupations.

She has recently started "a musical nursery school" in her home, where she is specializing in teaching music to five and six year old children.

"My purpose is to give intensive training in sight reading and ear training to prepare children for later study in music," she said.

A native of Oakland, Adela grew up in Ben Lomond in the Santa Cruz mountains. She began designing and selling children's clothes at the age of 15.

"I sold my dresses in two stores in Santa Cruz," she said. "After high school I studied dress designing at the Louise Salinger School of Dress Design and Arts and Fashions School in San Francisco, and in the evenings I studied business.

"Later I opened my own designing studio, doing custom dress making and designing, but I gave this up when Marla was born."

Mrs. Parada also has taken up crafts, gardening and interior decoration. In San Francisco she taught crafts and sewing to crippled and handicapped children in hospitals, and previously for three years she was in charge of dances for teen-agers in the Santa Cruz mountains.

She likes to travel, and she and her husband, a native of Guatemala, enjoyed driving there after their marriage. At the age of 18 she rode a bicycle alone from Donner summit to Carmel.

"The chapter is planning a puppet demonstration on Aug. 23," she said, "and there will be a baby beauty contest in September. Membership is open to any woman in Marin county. Visitors are welcome at any of our meetings held in my home during the summer, and in the fall we will again meet in Hammond Hall of the Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley."

MRS. LUIS F. PARADA

Other new officers serving with Mrs. Parada will be Mrs. Kenneth N. Ross of San Rafael, vice president; and Mrs. Kenneth W. Raymond of Mill Valley, secretary-treasurer.

Reber Just Bit Off Too Much; Now New Problems Crowd

Many a Marinite well remembers the late John Reber and his boundless enthusiasm for a vast plan to turn most of San Francisco Bay into freshwater lakes at cost of a mere three billion dollars.

With never-flagging vigor over a period of nearly three decades, until his death at 73 in 1960, Reber pounded away at his great idea of constructing a series of barriers not only penning in fresh water but also furnishing roadbeds for rail and highway transport. Ships would have passed through locks.

It is ironical that this week's report by army engineers after nine years of study both wallops the Reber Plan as "infeasible" and at the same time uses his barrier theory, though only for three possible constructions — two northern alternatives and one at the bay's south end.

It still looks like a substantial moral victory for John Reber. He had the idea but as is often the case with genius, too much of it!

Other studies are indicated of vital importance to Marin County. One of these is linked with what Brig. Gen. Arthur H. Frye Jr. terms "the necessity to plan for a vast sewage and waste collection system to empty into the Pacific before the tributary population of the bay reaches eight million. This figure may be reached within the next 30 to 35 years."

General Frye pointed to what he termed a corollary to this problem on a broader scale — "the continuing trend toward degradation of our environment."

Marin County recognizes the danger and is by no means inert. The general mentions what he calls present "limited controls" of air and water pollution, but adds: "It is almost a rule of thumb that the more our population increases, the more the environment is degraded."

An appalling thought, if true. At least it certainly comes mighty close to truth. Marin County is under the gun both because it faces perhaps the greatest population increase of our area, and because beauty is our greatest asset. An increasing number are aware of these facts. Hark again to General Frye:

> One of the greatest assets of the bay is the environment. With the preservation its present advantages, the cultivation of the amenities of living, the Bay Area will remain a focal point of influence — financial, cultural, and recreational—in California and the nation.
>
> But pollution of air and water, uncontrolled fills in the bay, the diminution of open spaces, lack of coordinated planning, and standards of varying degrees, can turn the area into a dismal, uncoordinated complex of unattractive suburbs to cities without character or natural attraction . . .
>
> The problems . . . are not impossible of resolution. I feel, however, that now—in this decade, in this year, in this month the people of this region have an issue before them: The positive, effective coordination of the planning, design, construction and operation of this coming intricate regional complex.

It is for such reasons as this that San Rafael Mayor John McInnis labored so hard to bring this county within the Association of Bay Area Governments. That he succeeded seems one of a number of hopeful points in sight as we contemplate a frightening future.

Bouquets And Brickbats

A BOUQUET to that hardiest of perennials Bill Fusselman, put solidly into the supervisorial chairmanship again as he contemplates his 75th birthday.

BRICKBATS mingled with flying garbage for anybody crass enough to lug his household refuse out to Samuel P. Taylor State Park in order to cheap-chisel it into a park can.

BOUQUETS for Mill Valley and San Anselmo, winners of American Automobile Assn. pedestrian safety citations.

Because County Auditor-Controller Mike Mitchell was beaned with a verbal brickbat when he asked supervisors to finish their equalization hearings by the Aug. 7 deadline, an I-J BOUQUET to level things off; he did right.

A BOUQUET to Asst. County Purchasing Agent John Hettrich for trying an auction of used county automobiles next Tuesday in hope of improving on trade-in valuations.

A BRICKBAT to Northwestern Pacific for moving to shut its Tiburon shops, blandly explained yet seemingly a logical part of its "let's leave Marin" attitude.

THINGS TO BOYLE ABOUT

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things we could all do without:

Career women who demand equal status with men, but don't do their fair share of pushing while going through a revolving door.

MIDDLE-AGED LADIES who say, "Oh fudge," or "My, isn't that yummy?"

Girls who say they never eat anything but a smidgen of tuna fish salad for lunch, but always order a one-pound sirloin steak when you take them to dinner.

People who buy astrology books and also insist professional wrestling is on the level.

COCKTAIL GUESTS who draw diagrams on your living room walls while trying to explain the principles of nuclear fission.

All snarly little dogs that look like ambulant mops—and sneak up and bite your ankle if you turn your back.

Parents who brag of being able to help their kids do their homework in algebra.

Friends who never have anything smaller than a $20 bill when we ride with them in a cab.

Any man over 50 with a full crop of hair and all his own teeth.

When a dog bites you, he also takes a nip out of your pocketbook. America's 600,000 dog-bite cases a year cost about five million dollars in medical expenses.

Incidentally, 76 per cent of the victims are under the age of 20. One study showed nearly two-thirds admitted the dog's attack was not entirely unprovoked.

HOT WEATHER hint: If your air-conditioner or electric fan breaks down, a quick way to cool off is to soak your feet in a pan full of water and ice cubes.

ONE WAY TO GET SLEEP

Would the soft patter of falling rain lull you to sleep even in the dry season?

If so, a new gadget that produces two variations of raindrop sounds may be just the thing for you. The device, made in Tokyo, is called "Sleeping Tone."

When the manufacturer of the unique sleep-inducer was asked if it really would end tossing about in bed and put a person to sleep, he optimistically claimed: "Yes, within 10 minutes."

To meet one's daily responsibilities, every individual requires adequate rest each night. In fact, it is part of God's creative plan that man should recharge his physical power by devoting approximately a third of his time to sleep.

Recall occasionally what Shakespeare said: "O sleep, O gentle sleep, nature's soft nurse." Make a reasonable effort to secure the adequate rest that will restore the vitality essential to confront your duties with vigor, diligence and enthusiasm.

"Sleep is sweet to the laboring man." (Ecclesiastes 5:11)

Bless, O Lord, the rest I take that I may renew my bodily strength and be better able to serve You.

Agreement On Scenic Road

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Your editorial "Let's Get Scenic Road Rules and Then Fix the Shoreline" gives reason to hope that Marin County is going to resolve by mutual agreement one of its most difficult questions. We hope so, and we thank you for the editorial.

At least we seem to have got the game into the same ball park. We have always said that an agreement on a scenic parkway type of design and route for State Route 1 might lead to a green light for early building of that road as a model for the State's Scenic Roads System.

We may disagree in the future, but let's rejoice in the blessings of today.

Several Marin Green Thumbs!

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Victor Bello was sole Marin winner at the Sonoma County Fair flower show in the potted plant division, according to award announcements.

During the final four days of the fair, Gerald Cahill and Laurence Kinney entered blooms in the cut flower division as did Mr. Bello. Mr. Cahill's dahlias were beauties.

We entered a beautiful red dahlia which looked like an award winner in our garden, but when it was put on display next to Mr. Cahill's its beauty and size were dwarfed into insignificance.

All these "bouquets" would not be complete unless we add another bouquet for our neighbor, Mr. Laurence Kinney, who very definitely has a green thumb, and also entered his prize gladioli in the cut flower division at Santa Rosa Fair at the same time. And how do you think he did? Yes, you guessed right! Another blue ribbon winner bringing a total of three Marinites who had lots of fun as they proudly displayed and shared their garden beauties with thousands of fair-goers.

Here's hoping they have stimulated other Marin flower lovers to participate in the Sonoma County Fair next summer, and for a starter let them start grooming their plants for the 1964 Art and Garden Fair in Ross.

Disappointed Over Appointment

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The appointment of an eight-month resident in Marin comes as quite a surprise and disappointment to many Marin County citizens.

I assume Mr. Leydecker is a capable gentleman but Mr. Editor, we have in the first district at least a dozen competent, capable candidates with many years residence who have sensed the pulse and problems of Marin County during this tenure.

It is obvious that this appointment was tainted with political stigma rather than intelligence. Why didn't the governor appoint Mayor McGinnis or Mr. Jordan? Is it because they are Republican and Governor Brown isn't? Did the governor give this appointment some thought or was he in a hurry to go off to Europe?

Why wasn't Mr. Walter Castro Jr. considered? Mr. Castro was close to his father and would have followed his wishes, besides he is a successful business man, native born, what more could you want? Young blood — he's got it.

Pity The Poor Architect Who Needs To Be A Fast Talker

A LITTLE SYMPATHY is in order for architects who have to sell their skills to public bodies.

They can't even claim "I can do it cheaper," because they're all operating in the same range of fees.

What they have to work with is experience, charm, a nimble tongue, a quick mind, perception and a set of sketches or pictures, preferably in color.

They do so well that one suspects they must attend a "method" school on how to make a pitch.

The current trend is for architects to appear in tandem like Huntley and Brinkley, or Ev and Charlie.

If one is older, stodgy and conservative, the other most likely will be younger, with a touch of dash.

If one is prone to the hard-sell, his partner will favor the soft-sell.

AND THEIR TIMING is perfect. While one is talking, the other watches the reactions of the board, and cuts in the moment he realizes things are going awry.

The men from small organizations will stress that they have stables of consultants at their fingertips. This is to overcome speculation that the job might be too big for them.

The men from large organizations will do their darndest to prove that size doesn't prevent them from giving personal service to the smallest job.

One of the trickiest questions an architect faces is "When can you start on the job?"

If he says "immediately," he gives the impression that he has no other projects on tap and for some reason or other is not in demand.

If he sets the starting date too far away, he gives the impression that he's swamped with work and the project under consideration would get lost in the shuffle.

A SAFE ANSWER is "We are finishing up some work now . . . but we could rush that and get to yours soon." This gives the impression that he's going to put himself out a little for the job.

The real one-upmanship comes with the architect who presents a few sketches of the proposed project, rather than just sketches of past projects. This guy is on the job before he has it.

The most unnerving thing for an architect is to make a presentation to a board that has another architect as a member.

He doesn't know whether his colleague is going to judge his work or his pitch, or worse yet, pick up a few pointers.

All in all the architects do bring a touch of aesthetics to usually prosaic board meetings. One can only hope that the best talker is the best architect.

HENRY MacARTHUR

Ride To Reno Soon Will Become Just Spin Around The Block

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—Approximately five years ago, a big hue and cry for the completion of Highway 40 as a full freeway from Sacramento to the Nevada state line was aroused. The objective was to have the freeway finished in honor of the 1960 Olympic Games at Squaw Valley.

At that time, no one who had any knowledge of road construction, especially in the mountains of California, had any idea the state would meet the 1960 deadline.

The freeway in fact hasn't been finished yet and won't be for nearly two years.

But according to Alan S. Stewart, assistant state highway engineer in District III, where the highway is located, monumental progress has been and is being made on U. S. 40.

THREE SECTIONS are under way, between Emigrant Gap and Hampshire Rocks, and over Donner Summit. With the completion of these three contracts, the highway will be freeway, with the exception of a short expressway in the vicinity of Auburn. And this section will be taken care of almost immediately, Hart said.

Only 22 miles remain to be constructed as a freeway out of the total of 115 miles from Sacramento, excepting the 14 miles near Auburn. First of the three jobs begins near Emigrant Gap, and runs to just beyond the junctions of State Sign Route 20. The second goes from there to the Cisco Grove area to Hampshire Rocks. The third job is the 10½ mile Donner Summit crossing, which extends from Soda Springs to the east end of Donner Lake.

Hart said that the Sacramento section of Interstate 80, which is the new name for U. S. 40, is costing motorists of the state approximately 110 million dollars, and he predicted it would be open to travel by the end of 1964, or during the 1965 construction season, depending on the very unpredictable weather in the high Sierra.

WHEN COMPLETED, it will represent the only freeway in the northern part of the state through the high Sierra. U. S. 50 to the south is being worked on in various sections at the present time, but a good many years will elapse before it will be a full freeway.

The new U. S. 40, according to Hart, has been constructed to accommodate motorists in a dangerous terrain. Opposing lanes in the mountains are wide enough apart to take snow from the plows. Extra wide shoulder areas will provide room to put on or remove tire chains. Rest areas will be located in convenient spots.

Thus most of the challenges to the motorist driving a mountain highway have been removed. The future drive to Reno will be no more than taking a ride around the block.

Some pleasures of driving a mountain highway have been removed, but the advantages of getting from here to there in a short space of time far outweigh the slowness of the old highway.

Completion of the road will mark more than just another freeway. It will be the end of an era, and the transfer into a new era of modern motoring which has little use for a sparsely traveled, two-lane highway.

It will mark the end of the use of the old "Donner Trail," on which pioneers lowered wagons down the mountains with ropes, and will be a tribute to the engineering ingenuity of highway construction.

General Frye pointed to what he termed a corollary to this problem on a broader scale — "the continuing trend toward degradation of our environment."

Marin County recognizes the danger and is by no means inert. The general mentions what he calls present "limited controls" of air and water pollution, but adds: "It is almost a rule of thumb that the more our population increases, the more the environment is degraded."

An appalling thought, if true. At least it certainly comes mighty close to truth. Marin County is under the gun both because it faces perhaps the greatest population increase of our area, and because beauty is our greatest asset. An increasing number are aware of these facts. Hark again to General Frye:

> One of the greatest assets of the bay is the environment. With the preservation its present advantages, the cultivation of the amenities of living, the Bay Area will remain a focal point of influence — financial, cultural, and recreational—in California and the nation.
>
> But pollution of air and water, uncontrolled fills in the bay, the diminution of open spaces, lack of coordinated planning, and standards of varying degrees, can turn the area into a dismal, uncoordinated complex of unattractive suburbs to cities without character or natural attraction . . .
>
> The problems . . . are not impossible of resolution. I feel, however, that now—in this decade, in this year, in this month the people of this region have an issue before them: The positive, effective coordination of the planning, design, construction and operation of this coming intricate regional complex.

It is for such reasons as this that San Rafael Mayor John McInnis labored so hard to bring this county within the Association of Bay Area Governments. That he succeeded seems one of a number of hopeful points in sight as we contemplate a frightening future.

ONE WAY TO GET SLEEP

Would the soft patter of falling rain lull you to sleep even in the dry season?

If so, a new gadget that produces two variations of raindrop sounds may be just the thing for you. The device, made in Tokyo, is called "Sleeping Tone."

When the manufacturer of the unique sleep-inducer was asked if it really would end tossing about in bed and put a person to sleep, he optimistically claimed: "Yes, within 10 minutes."

To meet one's daily responsibilities, every individual requires adequate rest each night. In fact, it is part of God's creative plan that man should recharge his physical power by devoting approximately a third of his time to sleep.

Recall occasionally what Shakespeare said: "O sleep, O gentle sleep, nature's soft nurse." Make a reasonable effort to secure the adequate rest that will restore the vitality essential to confront your duties with vigor, diligence and enthusiasm.

"Sleep is sweet to the laboring man."
(Ecclesiastes 5:11)

Bless, O Lord, the rest I take that I may renew my bodily strength and be better able to serve You.

Pity The Poor Architect Who Needs To Be A Fast Talker

A LITTLE SYMPATHY is in order for architects who have to sell their skills to public bodies.

They can't even claim "I can do it cheaper," because they're all operating in the same range of fees.

What they have to work with is experience, charm, a nimble tongue, a quick mind, perception and a set of sketches or pictures, preferably in color.

They do so well that one suspects they must attend a "method" school on how to make a pitch.

The current trend is for architects to appear in tandem like Huntley and Brinkley, or Ev and Charlie.

If one is older, stodgy and conservative, the other most likely will be younger, with a touch of dash.

If one is prone to the hard-sell, his partner will favor the soft-sell.

AND THEIR TIMING is perfect. While one is talking, the other watches the reactions of the board, and cuts in the moment he realizes things are going awry.

The men from small organizations will stress that they have stables of consultants at their fingertips. This is to overcome speculation that the job might be too big for them.

The men from large organizations will do their darndest to prove that size doesn't prevent them from giving personal service to the smallest job.

One of the trickiest questions an architect faces is "When can you start on the job?"

If he says "immediately," he gives the impression that he has no other projects on tap and for some reason or other is not in demand.

If he sets the starting date too far away, he gives the impression that he's swamped with work and the project under consideration would get lost in the shuffle.

A SAFE ANSWER is "We are finishing up some work now . . . but we could rush that and get to yours soon." This gives the impression that he's going to put himself out a little for the job.

The real one-upmanship comes with the architect who presents a few sketches of the proposed project, rather than just sketches of past projects. This guy is on the job before he has it.

The most unnerving thing for an architect is to make a presentation to a board that has another architect as a member.

He doesn't know whether his colleague is going to judge his work or his pitch, or worse yet, pick up a few pointers.

All in all the architects do bring a touch of aesthetics to usually prosaic board meetings. One can only hope that the best talker is the best architect.

THINGS TO BOYLE ABOUT

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things we could all do without:

Career women who demand equal status with men, but don't do their fair share of pushing while going through a revolving door.

MIDDLE-AGED LADIES who say, "Oh fudge," or "My, isn't that yummy?"

Girls who say they never eat anything but a smidgen of tuna fish salad for lunch, but always order a one-pound sirloin steak when you take them to dinner.

People who buy astrology books and also insist professional wrestling is on the level.

Bermuda shorts in the office.

COCKTAIL GUESTS who draw diagrams on your living room walls while trying to explain the principles of nuclear fission.

All snarly little dogs that look like ambulant mops—and sneak up and bite your ankle if you turn your back.

Parents who brag of being able to help their kids do their homework in algebra.

Friends who never have anything smaller than a $20 bill when we ride with them in a cab.

Any man over 50 with a full crop of hair and all his own teeth.

When a dog bites you, he also takes a nip out of your pocketbook. America's 600,000 dog-bite cases a year cost about five million dollars in medical expenses.

Incidentally, 76 per cent of the victims are under the age of 20. One study showed nearly two-thirds admitted the dog's attack was not entirely unprovoked.

HOT WEATHER hint: If your air-conditioner or electric fan breaks down, a quick way to cool off is to soak your feet in a pan full of water and ice cubes.

Agreement On Scenic Road

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Your editorial "Let's Get Scenic Road Rules and Then Fix the Shoreline" gives reason to hope that Marin County is going to resolve by mutual agreement one of its most difficult questions. We hope so, and we thank you for the editorial.

At least we seem to have got the game into the same ball park. We have always said that an agreement on a scenic parkway type of design and route for State Route 1 might lead to a green light for early building of that road as a model for the State's Scenic Roads System.

We may disagree in the future, but let's rejoice in the blessings of today.

Several Marin Green Thumbs!

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Victor Bello was sole Marin winner at the Sonoma County Fair flower show in the potted plant division, according to award announcements.

During the final four days of the fair, Gerald Cahill and Laurence Kinney entered blooms in the cut flower division as did Mr. Bello. Mr. Cahill's dahlias were beauties.

We entered a beautiful red dahlia which looked like an award winner in our garden, but when it was put on display next to Mr. Cahill's its beauty and size were dwarfed into insignificance.

All these "bouquets" would not be complete unless we add another bouquet for our neighbor, Mr. Laurence Kinney, who very definitely has a green thumb, and also entered his prize gladioli in the cut flower division at Santa Rosa Fair at the same time. And how do you think he did? Yes, you guessed right! Another blue ribbon winner bringing a total of three Marinites who had lots of fun as they proudly displayed and shared their garden beauties with thousands of fair-goers.

Here's hoping they have stimulated other Marin flower lovers to participate in the Sonoma County Fair next summer, and for a starter let them start grooming their plants for the 1964 Art and Garden Fair in Ross.

Disappointed Over Appointment

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The appointment of an eight-month resident in Marin comes as quite a surprise and disappointment to many Marin County citizens.

I assume Mr. Leydecker is a capable gentleman but Mr. Editor, we have in the first district at least a dozen competent, capable candidates with many years residence who have sensed the pulse and problems of Marin County during this tenure.

It is obvious that this appointment was tainted with political stigma rather than intelligence. Why didn't the governor appoint Mayor McGinnis or Mr. Jordan? Is it because they are Republican and Governor Brown isn't? Did the governor give this appointment some thought or was he in a hurry to go off to Europe?

Why wasn't Mr. Walter Castro Jr. considered? Mr. Castro was close to his father and would have followed his wishes, besides he is a successful business man, native born, what more could you want? Young blood — he's got it.

Ride To Reno Soon Will Become Just Spin Around The Block

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—Approximately five years ago, a big hue and cry for the completion of Highway 40 as a full freeway from Sacramento to the Nevada state line was aroused. The objective was to have the freeway finished in honor of the 1960 Olympic Games at Squaw Valley.

At that time, no one who had any knowledge of road construction, especially in the mountains of California, had any idea the state would meet the 1960 deadline.

The freeway in fact hasn't been finished yet and won't be for nearly two years.

But according to Alan S. Stewart, assistant state highway engineer in District III, where the highway is located, monumental progress has been and is being made on U. S. 40.

THREE SECTIONS are under way, between Emigrant Gap and Hampshire Rocks, and over Donner Summit. With the completion of these three contracts, the highway will be freeway, with the exception of a short expressway in the vicinity of Auburn. And this section will be taken care of almost immediately, Hart said.

Only 22 miles remain to be constructed as a freeway out of the total of 115 miles from Sacramento, excepting the 14 miles near Auburn. First of the three jobs begins near Emigrant Gap, and runs to just beyond the junctions of State Sign Route 20. The second goes from there to the Cisco Grove area to Hampshire Rocks. The third job is the 10½ mile Donner Summit crossing, which extends from Soda Springs to the east end of Donner Lake.

Hart said that the Sacramento section of Interstate 80, which is the new name for U. S. 40, is costing motorists of the state approximately 110 million dollars, and he predicted it would be open to travel by the end of 1964, or during the 1965 construction season, depending on the very unpredictable weather in the high Sierra.

WHEN COMPLETED, it will represent the only freeway in the northern part of the state through the high Sierra. U. S. 50 to the south is being worked on in various sections at the present time, but a good many years will elapse before it will be a full freeway.

The new U. S. 40, according to Hart, has been constructed to accommodate motorists in a dangerous terrain. Opposing lanes in the mountains are wide enough apart to take snow from the plows. Extra wide shoulder areas will provide room to put on or remove tire chains. Rest areas will be located in convenient spots.

Thus most of the challenges to the motorist driving a mountain highway have been removed. The future drive to Reno will be no more than taking a ride around the block.

Some pleasures of driving a mountain highway have been removed, but the advantages of getting from here to there in a short space of time far outweigh the slowness of the old highway.

Completion of the road will mark more than just another freeway. It will be the end of an era, and the transfer into a new era of modern motoring which has little use for a sparsely traveled, two-lane highway.

It will mark the end of the use of the old "Donner Trail," on which pioneers lowered wagons down the mountains with ropes, and will be a tribute to the engineering ingenuity of highway construction.

Passamaquoddy Bay Plan May Become Reality Soon

First Advocated In 1919, Strongly Supported By FDR

By FRANCIS STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A dream of nearly half a century — that of harnessing the giant tides of Passamaquoddy Bay on the Maine-Canadian border for a vast new supply of electricity—may become a reality within a few years.

It is a project first conceived about 1919 and has been strongly advocated by many persons throughout the ensuing years, including President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Roosevelt actually launched a start on the development in 1935. After a sum of 7 million dollars was allocated for initial work, Senate Republicans blocked further appropriations. They claimed the project was a "moondoggling" enterprise. The tides are actuated by the moon.

Roosevelt became enthusiastic about the plan after watching the surging tides while spending summers at his summer home on Campobello Island. The island is in a key position for helping form one of the huge reservoirs necessary for the hydro-electric development.

Since the unsuccessful attempt to get work going in 1935, the project has been studied off and on. Some experts have felt in the past that the development would be economically unsound. However, the view of many now is that changing times and technology would make it worthwhile.

Backing up this viewpoint, Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall has urged President John F. Kennedy to back a 1-billion dollar program for the project. Udall based his plea on a new study, undertaken in 1961 by a group of interior department experts.

Passamaquoddy Bay is an arm of the famous Bay of Fundy, a noted tourist attraction which has the greatest rise and fall of tides in the world.

On the Nova Scotia coast they range 40 to 50 feet in height. In the Passamaquoddy Bay area they vary from nearly 13 feet to 26, with an average of around 18.

Under the current plans, seven and one-half miles of ocean dams would be constructed at various places and would form two pools.

Passamaquoddy Bay would trap the incoming tidewaters and provide a storage pool for the water later to be dropped through turbines into a low pool formed by adjacent Cobscook Bay. At low tides the water in Cobscook Bay would be released.

Udall said the project could be completed within 15 years—and at a time when power needs in the northeastern U.S. and adjacent Canadian areas would be far greater than now.

The secretary said the U.S. would finance the whole project, but that power would be sold to Canadian purchasers at cost. All the power plants would be on the American side but some of the dams would be in Canada.

The tidal project would be coupled with a companion hydro-electric development on the upper St. John River, which would be the first construction.

Kennedy instructed the State Department to begin immediate negotiations with Canada for sharing the benefits of the project.

Meanwhile, it was believed that it would be about a year before the Administration submits to Congress any measure for authorizing the construction.

There was no immediate indication as to whether there might be any extensive opposition from political or private power interests.

It has been reported that the Soviet Union has plans for utilizing tides in the Arctic Sea, in a project of grand-scale proportions to produce 5 million kilowatts of power.

Shortly after Udall's plea to Kennedy to proceed with the project, Kennedy told a group of Senators and Representatives from New England:

"Harnessing the energy of the tides is an exciting technological undertaking . . . Each day over a million kilowatts of power surge in and out of the Passamaquoddy Bay. Man needs only to exercise his engineering ingenuity to convert the ocean's surge into a national asset."

CHANCES SEEM GOOD

Ethiopia Leader Of New Africa?

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — This capital of Ethiopia is likely to become the "capital of Africa" as well. The event will be another triumph for Emperor Haile Selassie—"King of Kings, the elect of God and Conquering Lion of Judah.'

Diplomatic sources say Addis Ababa is likely to be chosen as the headquarters for the new Organization of African Unity (OAU) when African foreign ministers meet in Dakar, Senegal, next month. It already is the headquarters of the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (ECA).

Everyone agrees the emperor, a 73-year-old monarch in a continent which runs to youthful republicans, scored an impressive victory for himself and for Ethiopia at the summit conference here last May which drafted the OAU charter.

It was he who insisted that the 30 African heads of state overrule the timidity of their foreign ministers and draft the charter here. Both foreign diplomats and Ethiopians credited him with the conference's success.

And that success has helped silence allegations at home, mostly youthful, that Ethiopia is moving ahead too slowly while the rest of Africa passed her by.

Haile Selassie's country has a history of 3,000 years, an area one and one-third the size of Texas and an estimated population of 20 million. Its soil is rich enough to feed 10 times that number and its scenery is spectacularly beautiful.

Its capital, Addis Ababa (The New Flower), is an increasingly modern city of 450,000 whose streets are lined with shiny walls of corrugated iron, hiding both new construction and old eye-sores alike.

Haile Selassie has rules for 47 years, from 1916 to 1930 as regent and from 1930 as emperor of a dynastic line that legend says originated from the meeting of King Solomon with the Queen of Sheba.

More than any other emperor, Haile Selassie has dragged Ethiopia forward, after centuries of isolation. A slight, bearded figure in full dress uniform, he rules with what diplomats here regard as consummate skill, balancing this group against that and holding Ethiopia together as no other man could.

The solitary leader who reproached the conscience of the world when the Italians invaded his country in 1936 is likely to be known as one of Ethiopia's greatest emperors.

But illiteracy is still 95 per cent and per capita income is only $47 a year.

Ethiopia is not standing still. But the younger civil servants would like to see faster constitutional advance.

In the middle rank of government officials, where the pressure for "reform" but not revolution becomes greater, a typical aspiration is for a full-fledged constitutional monarchy when the emperor dies. The crown prince is his eldest son, 50-year-old Afsa-Woseen Haile Selassie.

Now there are a prime minister, 16 ministers and a parliament composed of an elected lower house and an appointed upper house. The ministers are also appointed by the emperor and responsible to him.

The armed forces of 25,000 men are officers by the country's elite and equipped by the United States with everything from ships and tanks to F-86 jet fighters. With a wary eye on Somalia and Egypt, 34 per cent of the Ethiopian budget goes for the armed forces and police.

Eighty-five per cent of the national product comes from agricultural crops grown by peasant tenant farmers and herdsmen who make up nearly 90 per cent of the population. Coffee is the largest export and the United States takes 70 per cent of it.

In tacit return for an important radio relay station near Asmara, which is a vital link in American global communications, Ethiopia has received some $114,100,000 in grants and loans from the United States during the past 10 years, and another 70 million dollars worth of military aid.

With more than 5,000 Americans in Ethiopia, it is one of the key American diplomatic posts on the continent.

The United States has fostered agricultural education and health, financed new jets for the airlines and sent 277 Peace Corps volunteers.

Halifax: 'Home' Port For Russ Ships

By LESLIE COHEN

Audaciously, a few hundred yards in its wake, steamed a Soviet trawler, bristling with radar and other sophisticated electronic gear.

Local residents didn't raise an eyebrow. For this East Coast port, steeped in the traditions of the sea in war and peace, is becoming a home away from home for hundreds of Russian sailors and their ships.

And it is commonplace to see U. S. and Soviet ships berthed side by side here. At one time recently, seven Russian ships operating out of Cuba were berthed at piers adjacent to a visiting U. S. navy carrier division.

The sight of the gold and red hammer and sickle is increasingly familiar both off Canada's east coast, sometimes in areas where allied warships exercise, and in Halifax harbor, which claims to handle more Russian ships than any other port in the Western world.

According to the Russians, they come here strictly as fishermen. They deny their mazes of radio and radar antennas or their complicated, apparently navy-style sounding or listening equipment are used anything other than to catch fish and navigate.

About 50 of the Communist ships use Halifax as their "home" port while fishing the Georges and Grand Banks this year. They include trawlers, water tankers, draggers, tugs and factory and "mother" ships. They have been using Halifax regularly during the February - November fishing season since the Soviets began exploiting the area in the northwest Atlantic four years ago for cod, herring and redfish.

Soviet seamen play soccer at dockside or walk the streets of Halifax in twos and threes—but almost never alone.

Local officials say there are no better behaved visitors to this city of about 100,000 than the Russians. The supplies the Soviets purchase include alcoholic beverages, but "we never have any trouble with them," said one official.

A spokesman for the local shipping agent who services the Russian fleet estimates an average of 30 different ships dock here about 100 times per year for repairs, water and other supplies. During June, Russian ships berthed at an average of one a day.

The Russian fleet almost always enters Halifax harbor in groups of two or more. They first make contact with their shipping agent, giving them their estimated time of arrival a day in advance.

The shipping agent arranges with the harbormaster for pilots, tugs and berthing space for the Soviets, depending on their needs. If necessary, as in the recent case of a stricken Russian seaman who was rushed to a hospital, the agent contacted the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa with particulars.

The Russians, who seem to strive to give a continuous appearance of correctness, do not encounter any clearance difficulty with Canadian immigration and customs officials, who find them "very cooperative." Once they have filled out the necessary forms and the crew is found to be in order, they are allowed ashore.

The Soviets have proved to be an economic blessing to merchants. In addition to trade in such traditional sailor fare as souvenir trinkets and nylons, the Soviets occasionally spend as much as $1,000 in replenishing supplies. Typical Russian food order would include Canadian potatoes, oranges from California and South African radishes from Massachusetts, onions from Texas, Canadian meat and a stock of local beer and whisky.

The seamen are friendly but do not invite intimate contacts. They normally will pose cheerfully for newspaper pictures and, while many speak English, they will converse in their native tongue until they are certain of the stranger's purpose. More often they will refer the stranger to the captain in broken English.

The Russians recently let newsmen tour two of their ships, a trawler out of Cuba and a water tanker serving the Atlantic fishing fleet. The guided tours extended from stem to stern and from the bilges to the bridge.

But the guides did not divulge anything more than cursory information on some of their more complex and sophisticated radar gear.

On each ship, the 502-ton Oka, a tern trawler from Kalingrad, Russia, which operates out of Cuba, and the tanker Vyru, from Tallin, Russia (Estonia), most of the crew have their own rooms equipped with bed, desk, bookshelf and chairs. The officers' rooms were distinguishable by the addition of food and drink.

In the galley of the Oka hung pictures of Lenin and Fidel Castro posing with an unidentified person. Russian newspapers were in evidence and several reels of movie film, exchanged between ships while in port, lay on a table.

Missing from the bridge of the Oka was the normal wheel-type helm and engine telegraph used on most ships. Instead, the East German-built vessel features an electrical steering system that operates by manipulating three plungers; one each for turning right and left and the third to regulate speed.

Capt. Georgy Crechihin, 37, showed UPI a series of three sonar machines which he said were used to detect fish. One piece of sonar gear operates as a television set, another on the bridge scans a graph on a roll of paper and a third was located in the adjoining navigation room above the chart table.

The Oka is a stern trawler and pulls its nets over the stern of the ship with cables. She holds about 1,000 tons of fish which are subsequently transferred to one of the "mother" ships.

The Soviet ships usually spend up to seven months at sea, starting in the Atlantic off the coast of Africa and working their way west to the North American side of the ocean.

They generally fish the Grand Banks beginning in March and then move on to Georges in May. Last year the Russians took four million metric tons of fish and whale from all parts of the world except the Indian Ocean. Their North Atlantic operation produced a catch of about 300,000 metric tons, according to tables of the International Commission for Northwest Atlantic Fisheries.

Focus On 'Non-Pact' Nations

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

As negotiators from Russia, the United States and Britain gathered in Moscow at week's end to sign a limited nuclear test ban, world attention focused on two nations not represented there.

One was Red China, the hulking, truculent giant of the Communist world.

The other was France. President Charles de Gaulle, in a press conference from the dais of the Salles des Fetes in the Elysee Palace, pursued his vision of an independent French destiny once more by announcing that she would not join the moratorium.

At a mid-week news conference, President John F. Kennedy conceded that Communist China could create a "potentially more dangerous situation than any we have faced since the end of World War II."

The president said it might be 10 years before Red China gained nuclear capability, but noted the clear threat of a nuclear arsenal in the hands of "a country of 700 million people under Stalinist government that is calling for international war."

De Gaulle's rejection of the pact reopened the problem of differing priorities within the western bloc and prompted Kennedy to suggest that the United States and Britain might share nuclear knowledge and weapons secrets with France.

Diplomatic sources indicated that France might be interested in the offer. With a de Gaulle visit to Washington in the making, the sources foresaw the possibility of a U.S.-French approachment on the nuclear issue.

Passamaquoddy Bay would trap the incoming tidewaters and provide a storage pool for the water later to be dropped through turbines into a low pool formed by adjacent Cobscook Bay. At low tides the water in Cobscook Bay would be released.

Udall said the project could be completed within 15 years—and at a time when power needs in the northeastern U.S. and adjacent Canadian areas would be far greater than now.

The secretary said the U.S. would finance the whole project, but that power would be sold to Canadian purchasers at cost. All the power plants would be on the American side but some of the dams would be in Canada.

The tidal project would be coupled with a companion hydro-electric development on the upper St. John River, which would be the first construction.

Kennedy instructed the State Department to begin immediate negotiations with Canada for sharing the benefits of the project.

Meanwhile, it was believed that it would be about a year before the Administration submits to Congress any measure for authorizing the construction.

There was no immediate indication as to whether there might be any extensive opposition from political or private power interests.

It has been reported that the Soviet Union has plans for utilizing tides in the Arctic Sea, in a project of grand-scale proportions to produce 5 million kilowatts of power.

Shortly after Udall's plea to Kennedy to proceed with the project, Kennedy told a group of Senators and Representatives from New England:

"Harnessing the energy of the tides is an exciting technological undertaking . . . Each day over a million kilowatts of power surge in and out of the Passamaquoddy Bay. Man needs only to exercise his engineering ingenuity to convert the ocean's surge into a national asset."

CHANCES SEEM GOOD

Ethiopia Leader Of New Africa?

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — This capital of Ethiopia is likely to become the "capital of Africa" as well. The event will be another triumph for Emperor Haile Selassie—"King of Kings, the elect of God and Conquering Lion of Judah."

Diplomatic sources say Addis Ababa is likely to be chosen as the headquarters for the new Organization of African Unity (OAU) when African foreign ministers meet in Dakar, Senegal, next month. It already is the headquarters of the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (ECA).

Everyone agrees the emperor, a 73-year-old monarch in a continent which runs to youthful republicans, scored an impressive victory for himself and for Ethiopia at the summit conference here last May which drafted the OAU charter.

It was he who insisted that the 30 African heads of state overrule the timidity of their foreign ministers and draft the charter here. Both foreign diplomats and Ethiopians credited him with the conference's success.

And that success has helped silence allegations at home, mostly youthful, that Ethiopia is moving ahead too slowly while the rest of Africa passed her by.

Haile Selassie's country has a history of 3,000 years, an area one and one-third the size of Texas and an estimated population of 20 million. Its soil is rich enough to feed 10 times that number and its scenery is spectacularly beautiful.

Its capital, Addis Ababa (The New Flower), is an increasingly modern city of 450,000 whose streets are lined with shiny walls of corrugated iron, hiding both new construction and old eye-sores alike.

Haile Selassie has rules for 47 years, from 1916 to 1930 as regent and from 1930 as emperor of a dynastic line that legend says originated from the meeting of King Solomon with the Queen of Sheba.

More than any other emperor, Haile Selassie has dragged Ethiopia forward, after centuries of isolation. A slight, bearded figure in full dress uniform, he rules with what diplomats here regard as consummate skill, balancing this group against that and holding Ethiopia together as no other man could.

The solitary leader who reproached the conscience of the world when the Italians invaded his country in 1936 is likely to be known as one of Ethiopia's greatest emperors.

But illiteracy is still 95 per cent and per capita income is only $47 a year.

Ethiopia is not standing still. But the younger civil servants would like to see faster constitutional advance.

In the middle rank of government officials, where the pressure for "reform" but not revolution becomes greater, a typical aspiration is for a full-fledged constitutional monarchy when the emperor dies. The crown prince is his eldest son, 50-year-old Afsa-Woseen Haile Selassie.

Now there are a prime minister, 16 ministers and a parliament composed of an elected lower house and an appointed upper house. The ministers are also appointed by the emperor and responsible to him.

The armed forces of 25,000 men are officers by the country's elite and equipped by the United States with everything from ships and tanks to F-86 jet fighters. With a wary eye on Somalia and Egypt, 34 per cent of the Ethiopian budget goes for the armed forces and police.

Eighty-five per cent of the national product comes from agricultural crops grown by peasant tenant farmers and herdsmen who make up nearly 90 per cent of the population. Coffee is the largest export and the United States takes 70 per cent of it.

In tacit return for an important radio relay station near Asmara, which is a vital link in American global communications, Ethiopia has received some $114,100,000 in grants and loans from the United States during the past 10 years, and another 70 million dollars worth of military aid.

With more than 5,000 Americans in Ethiopia, it is one of the key American diplomatic posts on the continent.

The United States has fostered agricultural education and health, financed new jets for the airlines and sent 277 Peace Corps volunteers.

Behind The News

A Weekly Page of Background Information

Halifax: 'Home' Port For Russ Ships

By LESLIE COHEN

Audaciously, a few hundred yards in its wake, steamed a Soviet trawler, bristling with radar and other sophisticated electronic gear.

Local residents didn't raise an eyebrow. For this East Coast port, steeped in the traditions of the sea in war and peace, is becoming a home away from home for hundreds of Russian sailors and their ships.

And it is commonplace to see U. S. and Soviet ships berthed side by side here. At one time recently, seven Russian ships operating out of Cuba were berthed at piers adjacent to a visiting U. S. navy carrier division.

The sight of the gold and red hammer and sickle is increasingly familiar both off Canada's east coast, sometimes in areas where allied warships exercise, and in Halifax harbor, which claims to handle more Russian ships than any other port in the Western world.

According to the Russians, they come here strictly as fishermen. They deny their mazes of radio and radar antennas or their complicated, apparently navy-style sounding or listening equipment are used anything other than to catch fish and navigate.

About 50 of the Communist ships use Halifax as their "home" port while fishing the Georges and Grand Banks this year. They include trawlers, water tankers, draggers, tugs and factory and "mother" ships. They have been using Halifax regularly during the February - November fishing season since the Soviets began exploiting the area in the northwest Atlantic four years ago for cod, herring and redfish.

Soviet seamen play soccer at dockside or walk the streets of Halifax in twos and threes—but almost never alone.

Local officials say there are no better behaved visitors to this city of about 100,000 than the Russians. The supplies the Soviets purchase include alcoholic beverages, but "we never have any trouble with them," said one official.

A spokesman for the local shipping agent who services the Russian fleet estimates an average of 30 different ships dock here about 100 times per year for repairs, water and other supplies. During June, Russian ships berthed at an average of one a day.

The Russian fleet almost always enters Halifax harbor in groups of two or more. They first make contact with their shipping agent, giving them their estimated time of arrival a day in advance.

The shipping agent arranges with the harbormaster for pilots, tugs and berthing space for the Soviets, depending on their needs. If necessary, as in the recent case of a stricken Russian seaman who was rushed to a hospital, the agent contacted the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa with particulars.

The Russians, who seem to strive to give a continuous appearance of correctness, do not encounter any clearance difficulty with Canadian immigration and customs officials, who find them "very cooperative." Once they have filled out the necessary forms and the crew is found to be in order, they are allowed ashore.

The Soviets have proved to be an economic blessing to merchants. In addition to trade in such traditional sailor fare as souvenir trinkets and nylons, the Soviets occasionally spend as much as $1,000 in replenishing supplies. Typical Russian food order would include Canadian potatoes, oranges from California and South African radishes from Massachusetts, onions from Texas, Canadian meat and a stock of local beer and whisky.

The seamen are friendly but do not invite intimate contacts. They normally will pose cheerfully for newspaper pictures and, while many speak English, they will converse in their native tongue until they are certain of the stranger's purpose. More often they will refer the stranger to the captain in broken English.

The Russians recently let newsmen tour two of their ships, a trawler out of Cuba and a water tanker serving the Atlantic fishing fleet. The guided tours extended from stem to stern and from the bilges to the bridge.

But the guides did not divulge anything more than cursory information on some of their more complex and sophisticated radar gear.

On each ship, the 502-ton Oka, a tern trawler from Kalingrad, Russia, which operates out of Cuba, and the tanker Vyru, from Tallin, Russia (Estonia), most of the crew have their own rooms equipped with bed, desk, bookshelf and chairs. The officers' rooms were distinguishable by the addition of food and drink.

In the galley of the Oka hung pictures of Lenin and Fidel Castro posing with an unidentified person. Russian newspapers were in evidence and several reels of movie film, exchanged between ships while in port, lay on a table.

Missing from the bridge of the Oka was the normal wheeltype helm and engine telegraph used on most ships. Instead, the East German-built vessel features an electrical steering system that operates by manipulating three plungers; one each for turning right and left and the third to regulate speed.

Capt. Georgy Crechihin, 37, showed UPI a series of three sonar machines which he said were used to detect fish. One piece of sonar gear operates as a television set, another on the bridge scans a graph on a roll of paper and a third was located in the adjoining navigation room above the chart table.

The Oka is a stern trawler and pulls its nets over the stern of the ship with cables. She holds about 1,000 tons of fish which are subsequently transferred to one of the "mother" ships.

The Soviet ships usually spend up to seven months at sea, starting in the Atlantic off the coast of Africa and working their way west to the North American side of the ocean.

They generally fish the Grand Banks beginning in March and then move on to Georges in May. Last year the Russians took four million metric tons of fish and whale from all parts of the world except the Indian Ocean. Their North Atlantic operation produced a catch of about 300,000 metric tons, according to tables of the International Commission for Northwest Atlantic Fisheries.

This Week In The World

Focus On 'Non-Pact' Nations

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

As negotiators from Russia, the United States and Britain gathered in Moscow at week's end to sign a limited nuclear test ban, world attention focused on two nations not represented there.

One was Red China, the hulking, truculent giant of the Communist world.

The other was France. President Charles de Gaulle, in a press conference from the dais of the Salles des Fetes in the Elysee Palace, pursued his vision of an independent French destiny once more by announcing that she would not join the moratorium.

At a mid-week news conference, President John F. Kennedy conceded that Communist China could create a "potentially more dangerous situation than any we have faced since the end of World War II."

The president said it might be 10 years before Red China gained nuclear capability, but noted the clear threat of a nuclear arsenal in the hands of "a country of 700 million people under Stalinist government that is calling for international war."

De Gaulle's rejection of the pact reopened the problem of differing priorities within the western bloc and prompted Kennedy to suggest that the United States and Britain might share nuclear knowledge and weapons secrets with France.

Diplomatic sources indicated that France might be interested in the offer. With a de Gaulle visit to Washington in the making, the sources foresaw the possibility of a U.S.-French approachment on the nuclear issue.

Around The World Around The Clock

Korea—In the most violent outbreak on the North-South Korea border since the Panmunjom truce of 1953, three American soldiers were killed by Communists who ventured into South Korea. Retaliatory fire killed four North Koreans.

Havana—Some 50 American students touring Fidel Castro's regime as guests of the Cuban government will have their passports revoked, according to President Kennedy. (Included in the group was Carol B. Esteves of San Anselmo.)

Washington—Administration officials foresaw retaliatory tariffs by the U.S. against some Common Market nations because of the European bloc's refusal to reverse new and higher tariffs on American poultry products.

New York — The U.S. attorney's office disclosed that James M. Landis, former dean of Harvard Law School and a one-time advisor to President Kennedy, had pleaded guilty to delaying payment of federal income tax returns for the years 1956-1960.

Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the jack of hearts and courageously led the six of spades from dummy.

TO BLOW UP

The hand was about to blow up in his face, but South was not going to show the white feather.

East took the ace of spades and led another heart. Declarer led another trump to West's king, and back came a diamond to East's ace.

Now East led a third heart, and West's ruff defeated the contract. During all this time South never winced or showed any displeasure or pain. Very admirable.

IF YOU INSIST

Not so admirable if you insist on making a cold contract when you can.

After all, it isn't too hard for South to see the danger of a heart ruff.

Why should he draw trumps as usual when this will give the opponents time to get their ruff?

WINS HEART

He wins the heart return and cashes the king and jack of diamonds to discard two hearts from the dummy.

That takes all the hearts out of the dummy and guarantees the contract since dummy can not be over-ruffed except by the ace or king of spades.

New county growing in Marin ... and a newspaper growing in service

Marin's boundaries haven't changed a whisker on the map. But "inside" is boundless growth . . . almost a new county in itself.

Everywhere is the yeast of growth: Plans for sub-divisions that could well be called plans for cities. Earthmovers scooping up the present and moving it into the future. Capital flowing in from New York, Chicago, Miami—name it.

Today, a $7,500,000 apartment project for Corte Madera is announced in one breath, a new shopping center for Larkspur with another. At Northgate, the Emporium is replacing a mountain. On Highway 101, a hundred and one changes in landscape will bring in shopping centers, over-passes, frontage-roads . . . and a new era in shopping convenience.

From the State comes a prediction: Marin will increase 68% in population between now and 1970. Staid Chase-Manhattan Bank of New York says Marin will be the "site of the next population-explosion" in Northern California.

More people. More building. An empty lot today, a high-rise apartment tomorrow. Steel, brick, timber, glass . . . going up at almost frenetic pace. Multi-million dollar "pueblos" are making a new condensed world of living—condominiums, garden, marina apartments, built around a pool.

It takes money. But Marin makes it—the highest-income county in all 11 Western states with an average of $10,078 per family. Which may explain why automobile sales went up 10.1% last year and why the Smiths and the Joneses of Marin now average 1.42 cars in the family garage.

Money too, explains why retail sales, at $212 million, went up 9.6% in 1962 and are ring-a-dinging the register in 1963. Even the bankers must be impressed; they're making a handsome deposit on the future with their own brand new buildings.

This is the new county growing within Marin. And pacing the change is your "communications center", the county-wide Independent-Journal.

By giving you more news coverage, more pages, more features, we help you grow . . . by keeping you better informed. We help advertisers grow by winning more and more readers and their attention.

And we grow, not by grasping the coat-tails of progress, but by reaching out for more and better ways in which to serve you.

WHEN A NEWSPAPER IS PROGRESSIVE, IT GROWS

- I-J circulation now 32,217, has grown faster than population—up 104% in 10 years (Population, up 70%)
- Read by 2 out of every 3 families in Marin County

New county growing in Marin... and a newspaper growing in service

Marin's boundaries haven't changed a whisker on the map. But "inside" is boundless growth . . . almost a new county in itself.

Everywhere is the yeast of growth: Plans for sub-divisions that could well be called plans for cities. Earthmovers scooping up the present and moving it into the future. Capital flowing in from New York, Chicago, Miami—name it.

Today, a $7,500,000 apartment project for Corte Madera is announced in one breath, a new shopping center for Larkspur with another. At Northgate, the Emporium is replacing a mountain. On Highway 101, a hundred and one changes in landscape will bring in shopping centers, over-passes, frontage-roads . . . and a new era in shopping convenience.

From the State comes a prediction: Marin will increase 68% in population between now and 1970. Staid Chase-Manhattan Bank of New York says Marin will be the "site of the next population-explosion" in Northern California.

More people. More building. An empty lot today, a high-rise apartment tomorrow. Steel, brick, timber, glass . . . going up at almost frenetic pace. Multi-million dollar "pueblos" are making a new condensed world of living—condominiums, garden, marina apartments, built around a pool.

It takes money. But Marin makes it—the highest-income county in all 11 Western states with an average of $10,078 per family. Which may explain why automobile sales went up 10.1% last year and why the Smiths and the Joneses of Marin now average 1.42 cars in the family garage.

Money too, explains why retail sales, at $212 million, went up 9.6% in 1962 and are ring-a-dinging the register in 1963. Even the bankers must be impressed; they're making a handsome deposit on the future with their own brand new buildings.

This is the new county growing within Marin. And pacing the change is your "communications center", the county-wide Independent-Journal.

By giving you more news coverage, more pages, more features, we help you grow . . . by keeping you better informed. We help advertisers grow by winning more and more readers and their attention.

And we grow, not by grasping the coat-tails of progress, but by reaching out for more and better ways in which to serve you.

College All-Stars Surprise Mighty Green Bay, 20-17

CHICAGO (UPI) — All-Star coach Otto Graham basked in the applause due a winner today, but the eventual winners from last night's collegiate victory over the Green Bay Packers probably will be the Minnesota Vikings, the Chicago Bears and the Washington Redskins.

The Vikings have title to All-Star quarterback Ron Vanderkelen, the Bears to place-kicking pass-catching end Bob Jencks and the Redskins to pass-catcher Pat Richter.

They were the key men in the Stars 20-17 triumph, an upset scored by a two touchdown underdog team that ignored the odds, and even drew praise from Packer coach Vince Lombardi.

"We wanted to run," he said, "but they wouldn't let us. I thought we were up, but we just went flat. I expected them to play a fine game and they did."

Vanderkelen, who played about 75 per cent of the game on offense, completed eight of 10 passes, one of them for 21 yards to Richter, his Wisconsin teammate, to set up a five yard touchdown run by Iowa's Larry Ferguson, and another for 73 yards to Richter for the clinching touchdown.

But Vanderkelen's other throws kept the Packer defense off balance to set up ground gains of 141 yards, and when the offense stalled, Jencks took over. He kicked field goals of 20 and 33 yards in addition to the point after both touchdowns.

The All-Star defense deserved equal credit. Arkansas Danny Brabham was a linebacking standout in a defense which permitted Bart Starr to complete only three of 12 in the first half and only 19 of 33 for the game for 169 yards.

Fullback Jim Taylor got both Packer touchdowns, on one yard plunges, and Jerry Kramer got the other points, on two conversions and a 21 yard field goal.

The All-Star victory, breaking a four-game collegiate losing streak in the series, also snapped a 19-game Packer winning streak in exhibition games. It was the ninth collegiate win in the series in which the pros have won 19 with two ties.

Graham had praise for everybody who got in the game. "Green Bay was bigger," he said, "but our offense line really moved, and our backfield had plenty of speed.

"The big difference was that they did exactly what they were told. They made mistakes, but not a big one. The Packers had to earn their scores."

Graham regretted only that all of his squad didn't play. "I promised all they would play," he said, "and its the first time I went back on a promise. But as soon as I thought we could win, I put Vanderkelen back in."

Mississippi's Glynn Griffing had started the second half, but yielded to Vanderkelen for the 10-point fourth period splurge which produced the decision.

Giants: Case Of Extremes

CHICAGO (AP) — "From the ridiculous to the sublime," goes the old saying—but not the San Francisco Giants.

They're traveling backwards—from the sublime to the ridiculous to the ultra-ridiculous.

The situation was so bizarre that Jack Sanford, who couldn't retire a single Chicago Cub yesterday, was back on the starting line for the third-place Giants.

San Francisco reached the heights of sublimity early this week as its winning streak hit nine games.

Ridiculousness entered Wednesday in a 14-inning 7-3 loss to Philadelphia that included erring defensive specialists, pitching collapses and a bases-loaded, none-out rally that flopped.

The ultra-ridiculous took over yesterday in a 10-inning 21-11 defeat by Chicago wherein Sanford departed after 12 pitches, a five-run Giants eighth inning was outdone by a six-run Cubs eighth and a dying quail single in the gloom won the game for Chicago.

When yesterday's 35-hit foot race was over, the Giants were still 4½ games behind Los Angeles, but were a game behind second-place St. Louis.

Sanford, 10-11, faced Bob Buhl, 9-8, in the series' second game.

Chronologically, the 3-hour-57-minute struggle went this way:

Sanford's 12 pitches resulted in singles by Lou Brock and Ellis Burton, a three-run homer by Billy Williams and a single by Ron Santo. Almost before Santo's safety hit the ground, Jim Duffalo was on his way to replace Sanford.

Duffalo pitched excellently for 5⅓ innings, giving up one run only when Willie McCovey misplayed a fifth-inning double by Burton in short left. Meanwhile, the Giants tied the score with three runs in the second—two on Tom Haller's single—and went ahead with two in the third.

In the sixth, Duffalo yielded a bounding one-out single to Ken Hubbs and was immediately lifted for Bob Bolin. Willie Mays clouted his 25th home run in the seventh but the Cubs got it back in the seventh against Bolin, making the score 6-5.

The Giants scored five runs against three Chicago pitchers in the eighth, the crowning blow being Orlando Cepeda's three-run homer that widened the margin to 11-5.

Then Bolin emulated Sanford: Hubbs doubled, Jim Schaffer singled, Andre Rogers walked and pinch-hitter Leo Burke slammed a three-run homer.

Billy Hoeft was only half as ineffective: Lou Brock singled and Burton homered, tying the score.

Came the tenth with Don Larsen on the mound and Santo singled with one out. Hubbs struck out, but then Schaffer dropped his pop single into right field and darkness settled—both on the field and on the Giants.

Dodgers Fall To Houston Colts 4-1

By U. P. International

Ever hear of Jim Wynn?

The Los Angeles Dodgers sure have and wish they hadn't.

And if you haven't heard of him yet, you probably will because the 21-year-old Houston newcomer already has put in his bid for Rookie of the Year even though he has been in the National League only 24 days.

Wynn, who has only one season of Class D experience under his belt, was drafted for $8,000 and installed into the Colts' lineup for the first time on July 10, clipped Don Drysdale for a homer, double and a single last night in pacing Houston to a 4-1 victory over Los Angeles.

The loss sliced the Dodgers' lead to 3½ games over the second-place Cardinals and undoubtedly caused Walt Alston to agree with Casey Stengel.

"How come you got such a great one for only $8,000 when we pay $200,000 for some of our guys and they can't even play for us?"

Wynn, a Cincinnati native, struck the winning blow for the Colts last night when he drilled his second homer of the season following Carl Warwick's single in the second inning.

Houston manager Harry Craft ordinarily plays Wynn at shortstop. Last night he used him in center field, but no matter where the youngster plays he hits.

Since he moved into the line-up, Wynn has hit the ball at a consistent .280 clip. His RBI rate, on-base rate and total-base rate is by far the best on the Colts.

Wynn's hitting last night was instrumental in dealing Drysdale his 12th defeat against 13 victories. Ex-Dodger Dick Farrell beat his former teammates for the third time this year with a six-hitter that brought his season record to 9-8.

OTHER GAMES

Elsewhere in the N.L., the Cardinals edged the Phillies, 3-2, the Reds blanked the Pirates, 3-0, the Cubs outlasted the Giants, 12-11 in 10 innings, and the Braves beat the Mets, 8-0, in the opener but dropped the 11-inning nightcap, 3-1.

In the American League, the Orioles downed the Yankees, 5-3, the Tigers defeated the Indians, 10-9, the Twins trounced the Athletics, 10-3, the White Sox topped the Angels, 5-1, and the Red Sox won their opener with the Senators, 5-0, but lost the nightcap, 4-3.

The Cardinals handed Dennis Bennett of the Phils his first defeat after three straight victories when they scored two runs on a wild throw by shortstop Ruben Amaro. Ray Sadecki picked up his seventh victory although he needed help in the ninth.

Jim Maloney won his sixth straight game and 17th of the season for the Reds with a four-hitter over the Pirates. Maloney struck out 11 and was home free after Vada Pinson hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning off Don Cardwell.

JACK RULE LEADS IN ST. PAUL OPEN

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Jack Rule, who intends no pun, says he isn't playing it by the rule any more, and that's a major reason he's leading by a comfortable margin today in the St. Paul Open Golf Tournament.

The 24-year-old Iowan carded a record-breaking 61 on the par-72 Keller course yesterday for a half-way total of 128 and a four-stroke bulge over second-place Jerry Pittman of Tulsa, Okla., at 132.

Now in his second year of professional play and seeking his first tourney victory, Rule says he's playing a more aggressive game these days.

"I got to the point where I was trying to play it too safe," he explained. "I was afraid to try anything, and wasn't getting anywhere. So I started to play offensive golf at Tucson, Ariz., this year."

His bankbook, still modest, backs him up. Since the Tucson tourney, Rule has been out of the money in only four of 19 tournaments. He's won $8,132.54, and only $158.75 came prior to his new game of attack.

He fired 11 birdies and seven pars in yesterday's round, hitting all greens in regulation figures. His 61 broke the St. Paul Open record of 62 shared by three players.

Rule's two-round total of 128 bettered the 129 set by Jerry Barber in 1956.

In third place, two strokes back of Pittman, was Don Fairfield of Perdido Bay, Fla., who added a 69 to his opening 65. Fred Hawkins, El Paso, Tex., was fourth with 70-65—135.

The 36-hole cutoff score for the $35,000 tourney, which carries first prize of $5,300, was 144, even par. Among those squeezing in at the limit were Dow Finsterwald, defending champion Doug Sanders, Joe Campbell and Jay and Lionel Hebert.

Welters To Battle On Television

Stable, ranked second by the WBA and fourth by Ring Magazine, is the betting choice over the Philadelphian, who is making his debut as a Garden headliner and television fighter.

Hayward, 24, never has gone more than eight rounds in compiling a 16-1-1 record, including seven knockouts.

Stable, 22, has swept his last four fights in boosting his record to 20-2-1, including six knockouts. The Cuban now lives in New York.

The bout will be telecast by ABC-TV, starting at 7 p.m. (DST).

Marin Colts Lose Tournament Final

UKIAH—The South Central Marin Colt All-Stars made it to the finals of the sectionals last night but were eliminated in the second game of a double header.

The Marin team won the first game 5-3, over Redding's All-Stars, but were trounced 13-0 in the second game against the same foes. Redding will advance to the Regional tournament starting next Tuesday in Blackfoot, Idaho.

Marin collected 11 hits in the first game to garner the victory. The winners scored three runs in the first inning on doubles by catcher Steve LeBeck and pitcher Gary Kerch and singles by Robin Prosch and Dave Beswick.

Redding scored one in the first inning and two more in the third to knot the score at 3-3. Beswick relieved Kerch in the fourth inning and finished out the game, getting credit for the win, his third against no defeats in tournament action.

South Central Marin scored the two winning runs in the fifth as a result of two errors, a base on balls, followed by singles by Cedric Collett and Tom Gootherts. Top hitters in the game were LeBeck with two doubles and Prosch, Gootherts and Jack Baglietto, each with two singles.

In the second game, Redding got as many runs as were needed in the opening inning when it went in front 5-0. The Redding stars added two in the third, two in the fourth and four more in the fifth for their 13 big runs. The loss was charged to Charles Locati, the starter, who was relieved in the fourth by Eddie Hutchison. Ralph Garner pitched the sixth and last inning of the game called because of the difference in score.

Marin had only three hits in the nightcap, a double by LeBeck and singles by Baglietto and Beswick. Marin was charged with nine errors in the game to none for Redding.

Collett led the Marin batters through the tournament with a .455 batting average. Other .400 hitters were Baglietto at .444 and Beswick at .417.

Top seeded Harvey Klyce defeated Charles Deardorff 6-0, 6-2, to win the singles for boys 18 and under.

Results of the finals were:

Boys 12 singles — Dan Chadbourne d. Andy Moffatt, 6-2, 3-6, 10-8.

San Rafael scored five runs in the first inning of its game but Sausalito came back strong to win. Jerome Grayson homered for the Sausalitans.

Bill Watson hit a homer in the seventh inning to break a scoreless game in Major League action. San Rafael jumped off to a 7-2 lead in its game, but barely hung on to win as Terra Linda left the bases loaded in the last inning.

Exhibition Grid Slate Picks Up Pace Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The exhibition football season, off to a stunning start with the College All-Stars' 20-17 upset of the Green Bay Packers, picks up tempo tonight with the accent on the American Football League.

The AFL, beginning its fourth season, opens its preseason firing with the defending champion Kansas City Chiefs taking on the Chargers in San Diego's Balboa Stadium and the Houston Oilers against the Broncos at Denver.

Play shifts to Oakland tomorrow when the Boston Patriots meet the Raiders.

The Chiefs won the AFL's third title last year as the Dallas Texans in a playoff game with Houston that was the longest on record. San Diego goes into the game with a preseason win string of 12, having never lost in three years of exhibition play.

The Texans won the league title last year with a history making 20-17 sudden-death overtime triumph over the Oilers, when Tommy Brooker kicked a 23-yard field goal in the second extra period. The game lasted 77 minutes and 54 seconds.

The New York Jets and Buffalo Bills will play their first games next week, when the 14-team National Football League starts pre-season play.

Regular AFL play starts Friday, Sept. 6, while the regular NFL season opens Saturday, Sept. 14.

Connolly Still 49er Holdout

The San Francisco 49ers planned an all-out scrimmage today which will help the team get ready for its Aug. 10 exhibition opener against Minnesota and also provide an acid test for rookies trying to survive the early cut-downs.

Still not in camp are Ted Connolly, who is engaged in a legal battle over his contract, and five prize rookies who last night helped the College All-Stars upset the world champion Green Bay Packers.

Defensive halfback Kermit Alexander and defensive tackle Charles Sieminski, both future 49ers, weer standouts on the collegians' defense that held the Packers in check. Both may be used on offense by the 49ers, however.

Good-looking rookies in 49er camp so far have included halfback Don Lisbon from Bowling Green and fullback Mike Lind of Notre Dame. They and the other yearlings face their acid test today, however.

Bar Twine Wins

Little League Finals Slated Today In Novato

Behind the four-hit pitching of Sonny Pasioles, the West Sacramento Little League All-Stars blanked the Petaluma team 3-0 yesterday in the sectionals of the Little League tourney at Pinheiro Field in Novato.

West Sacramento scored all three of its runs in the fifth inning on three singles and an error. The West Sacramento team will take on Concord American in the finals of the tourney today at 4 p.m. at Pinheiro Field.

CHICAGO (UPI) — All-Star coach Otto Graham basked in the applause due a winner today, but the eventual winners from last night's collegiate victory over the Green Bay Packers probably will be the Minnesota Vikings, the Chicago Bears and the Washington Redskins.

The Vikings have title to All-Star quarterback Ron Vanderkelen, the Bears to place-kicking pass-catching end Bob Jencks and the Redskins to pass-catcher Pat Richter.

They were the key men in the Stars 20-17 triumph, an upset scored by a two touchdown underdog team that ignored the odds, and even drew praise from Packer coach Vince Lombardi.

"We wanted to run," he said, "but they wouldn't let us. I thought we were up, but we just went flat. I expected them to play a fine game and they did."

Vanderkelen, who played about 75 per cent of the game on offense, completed eight of 10 passes, one of them for 21 yards to Richter, his Wisconsin teammate, to set up a five yard touchdown run by Iowa's Larry Ferguson, and another for 73 yards to Richter for the clinching touchdown.

But Vanderkelen's other throws kept the Packer defense off balance to set up ground gains of 141 yards, and when the offense stalled, Jencks took over. He kicked field goals of 20 and 33 yards in addition to the point after both touchdowns.

The All-Star defense deserved equal credit. Arkansas Danny Brabham was a linebacking standout in a defense which permitted Bart Starr to complete only three of 12 in the first half and only 19 of 33 for the game for 169 yards.

Fullback Jim Taylor got both Packer touchdowns, on one yard plunges, and Jerry Kramer got the other points, on two conversions and a 21 yard field goal.

The All-Star victory, breaking a four-game collegiate losing streak in the series, also snapped a 19-game Packer winning streak in exhibition games. It was the ninth collegiate win in the series in which the pros have won 19 with two ties.

Graham had praise for everybody who got in the game. "Green Bay was bigger," he said, "but our offense line really moved, and our backfield had plenty of speed.

"The big difference was that they did exactly what they were told. They made mistakes, but not a big one. The Packers had to earn their scores."

Graham regretted only that all of his squad didn't play. "I promised all they would play," he said, "and its the first time I went back on a promise. But as soon as I thought we could win, I put Vanderkelen back in."

Mississippi's Glynn Griffing had started the second half, but yielded to Vanderkelen for the 10-point fourth period splurge which produced the decision.

Giants: Case Of Extremes

CHICAGO (AP) — "From the ridiculous to the sublime," goes the old saying—but not the San Francisco Giants.

The situation was so bizarre that Jack Sanford, who couldn't retire a single Chicago Cub yesterday, was back on the starting line for the third-place Giants.

San Francisco reached the heights of sublimity early this week as its winning streak hit nine games.

Ridiculousness entered Wednesday in a 14-inning 7-3 loss to Philadelphia that included erring defensive specialists, pitching collapses and a bases-loaded, none-out rally that flopped.

The ultra-ridiculous took over yesterday in a 10-inning 21-11 defeat by Chicago wherein Sanford departed after 12 pitches, a five-run Giants eighth inning was outdone by a six-run Cubs eighth and a dying quail single in the gloom won the game for Chicago.

When yesterday's 35-hit foot race was over, the Giants were still 4½ games behind Los Angeles, but were a game behind second-place St. Louis.

Sanford, 10-11, faced Bob Buhl, 9-8, in the series' second game.

Chronologically, the 3-hour-57-minute struggle went this way:

Sanford's 12 pitches resulted in singles by Lou Brock and Ellis Burton, a three-run homer by Billy Williams and a single by Ron Santo. Almost before Santo's safety hit the ground, Jim Duffalo was on his way to replace Sanford.

Duffalo pitched excellently for 5⅓ innings, giving up one run only when Willie McCovey misplayed a fifth-inning double by Burton in short left. Meanwhile, the Giants tied the score with three runs in the second—two on Tom Haller's single—and went ahead with two in the third.

In the sixth, Duffalo yielded a bounding one-out single to Ken Hubbs and was immediately lifted for Bob Bolin. Willie Mays clouted his 25th home run in the seventh but the Cubs got it back in the seventh against Bolin, making the score 6-5.

The Giants scored five runs against three Chicago pitchers in the eighth, the crowning blow being Orlando Cepeda's three-run homer that widened the margin to 11-5.

Then Bolin emulated Sanford: Hubbs doubled, Jim Schaffer singled, Andre Rogers walked and pinch-hitter Leo Burke slammed a three-run homer.

Billy Hoeft was only half as ineffective: Lou Brock singled and Burton homered, tying the score.

Came the tenth with Don Larsen on the mound and Santo singled with one out. Hubbs struck out, but then Schaffer dropped his pop single into right field and darkness settled—both on the field and on the Giants.

JACK RULE LEADS IN ST. PAUL OPEN

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Jack Rule, who intends no pun, says he isn't playing it by the rule any more, and that's a major reason he's leading by a comfortable margin today in the St. Paul Open Golf Tournament.

The 24-year-old Iowan carded a record-breaking 61 on the par-72 Keller course yesterday for a half-way total of 128 and a four-stroke bulge over second-place Jerry Pittman of Tulsa, Okla., at 132.

Now in his second year of professional play and seeking his first tourney victory, Rule says he's playing a more aggressive game these days.

"I got to the point where I was trying to play it too safe," he explained. "I was afraid to try anything, and wasn't getting anywhere. So I started to play offensive golf at Tucson, Ariz., this year."

His bankbook, still modest, backs him up. Since the Tucson tourney, Rule has been out of the money in only four of 19 tournaments. He's won $8,132.54, and only $158.75 came prior to his new game of attack.

He fired 11 birdies and seven pars in yesterday's round, hitting all greens in regulation figures. His 61 broke the St. Paul Open record of 62 shared by three players.

Rule's two-round total of 128 bettered the 129 set by Jerry Barber in 1956.

In third place, two strokes back of Pittman, was Don Fairfield of Perdido Bay, Fla., who added a 69 to his opening 65. Fred Hawkins, El Paso, Tex., was fourth with 70-65—135.

The 36-hole cutoff score for the $35,000 tourney, which carries first prize of $5,300, was 144, even par. Among those squeezing in at the limit were Dow Finsterwald, defending champion Doug Sanders, Joe Campbell and Jay and Lionel Hebert.

Welters To Battle On Television

Stable, ranked second by the WBA and fourth by Ring Magazine, is the betting choice over the Philadelphian, who is making his debut as a Garden headliner and television fighter.

Hayward, 24, never has gone more than eight rounds in compiling a 16-1-1 record, including seven knockouts.

Stable, 22, has swept his last four fights in boosting his record to 20-2-1, including six knockouts. The Cuban now lives in New York.

The bout will be telecast by ABC-TV, starting at 7 p.m. (DST).

Marin Colts Lose Tournament Final

UKIAH—The South Central Marin Colt All-Stars made it to the finals of the sectionals last night but were eliminated in the second game of a double header.

The Marin team won the first game 5-3, over Redding's All-Stars, but were trounced 13-0 in the second game against the same foes. Redding will advance to the Regional tournament starting next Tuesday in Blackfoot, Idaho.

Marin collected 11 hits in the first game to garner the victory. The winners scored three runs in the first inning on doubles by catcher Steve LeBeck and pitcher Gary Kerch and singles by Robin Prosch and Dave Beswick.

Redding scored one in the first inning and two more in the third to knot the score at 3-3. Beswick relieved Kerch in the fourth inning and finished out the game, getting credit for the win, his third against no defeats in tournament action.

South Central Marin scored the two winning runs in the fifth as a result of two errors, a base on balls, followed by singles by Cedric Collett and Tom Gootherts. Top hitters in the game were LeBeck with two doubles and Prosch, Gootherts and Jack Baglietto, each with two singles.

In the second game, Redding got as many runs as were needed in the opening inning when it went in front 5-0. The Redding stars added two in the third, two in the fourth and four more in the fifth for their 13 big runs. The loss was charged to Charles Locati, the starter, who was relieved in the fourth by Eddie Hutchison. Ralph Garner pitched the sixth and last inning of the game called because of the difference in score.

Marin had only three hits in the nightcap, a double by LeBeck and singles by Baglietto and Beswick. Marin was charged with nine errors in the game to none for Redding.

Collett led the Marin batters through the tournament with a .455 batting average. Other .400 hitters were Baglietto at .444 and Beswick at .417.

Exhibition Grid Slate Picks Up Pace Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The exhibition football season, off to a stunning start with the College All-Stars' 20-17 upset of the Green Bay Packers, picks up tempo tonight with the accent on the American Football League.

The AFL, beginning its fourth season, opens its preseason firing with the defending champion Kansas City Chiefs taking on the Chargers in San Diego's Balboa Stadium and the Houston Oilers against the Broncos at Denver.

Play shifts to Oakland tomorrow when the Boston Patriots meet the Raiders.

The Chiefs won the AFL's third title last year as the Dallas Texans in a playoff game with Houston that was the longest on record. San Diego goes into the game with a preseason win string of 12, having never lost in three years of exhibition play.

The Texans won the league title last year with a history making 20-17 sudden-death overtime triumph over the Oilers, when Tommy Brooker kicked a 23-yard field goal in the second extra period. The game lasted 77 minutes and 54 seconds.

The New York Jets and Buffalo Bills will play their first games next week, when the 14-team National Football League starts pre-season play.

Regular AFL play starts Friday, Sept. 6, while the regular NFL season opens Saturday, Sept. 14.

Connolly Still 49er Holdout

The San Francisco 49ers planned an all-out scrimmage today which will help the team get ready for its Aug. 10 exhibition opener against Minnesota and also provide an acid test for rookies trying to survive the early cut-downs.

Still not in camp are Ted Connolly, who is engaged in a legal battle over his contract, and five prize rookies who last night helped the College All-Stars upset the world champion Green Bay Packers.

Defensive halfback Kermit Alexander and defensive tackle Charles Sieminski, both future 49ers, weer standouts on the collegians' defense that held the Packers in check. Both may be used on offense by the 49ers, however.

Good-looking rookies in 49er camp so far have included halfback Don Lisbon from Bowling Green and fullback Mike Lind of Notre Dame. They and the other yearlings face their acid test today, however.

Finals Slated Tomorrow For S.A. Tourney

Sausalito whipped San Rafael National 11-5 in Minor League action, Fairfax shut out St. Helena 3-0 in Major League play, and San Rafael nipped Terra Linda 7-6 in Junior League competition.

San Rafael scored five runs in the first inning of its game but Sausalito came back strong to win. Jerome Grayson homered for the Sausalitans.

Bill Watson hit a homer in the seventh inning to break a scoreless game in Major League action. San Rafael jumped off to a 7-2 lead in its game, but barely hung on to win as Terra Linda left the bases loaded in the last inning.

Finals of the tourney are slated tomorrow at San Anselmo's Memorial Park at 4 p.m.

Bar Twine Wins

Little League Finals Slated Today In Novato

Behind the four-hit pitching of Sonny Pasioles, the West Sacramento Little League All-Stars blanked the Petaluma team 3-0 yesterday in the sectionals of the Little League tourney at Pinheiro Field in Novato.

West Sacramento scored all three of its runs in the fifth inning on three singles and an error. The West Sacramento team will take on Concord American in the finals of the tourney today at 4 p.m. at Pinheiro Field.

Dodgers Fall To Houston Colts 4-1

By U. P. International

Ever hear of Jim Wynn?

The Los Angeles Dodgers sure have and wish they hadn't.

And if you haven't heard of him yet, you probably will because the 21-year-old Houston newcomer already has put in his bid for Rookie of the Year even though he has been in the National League only 24 days.

Wynn, who has only one season of Class D experience under his belt, was drafted for $8,000 and installed into the Colts' lineup for the first time on July 10, clipped Don Drysdale for a homer, double and a single last night in pacing Houston to a 4-1 victory over Los Angeles.

The loss sliced the Dodgers' lead to 3½ games over the second-place Cardinals and undoubtedly caused Walt Alston to agree with Casey Stengel.

"How come you got such a great one for only $8,000 when we pay $200,000 for some of our guys and they can't even play for us?"

Wynn, a Cincinnati native, struck the winning blow for the Colts last night when he drilled his second homer of the season following Carl Warwick's single in the second inning.

Houston manager Harry Craft ordinarily plays Wynn at shortstop. Last night he used him in center field, but no matter where the youngster plays he hits.

Since he moved into the line-up, Wynn has hit the ball at a consistent .280 clip. His RBI rate, on-base rate and total-base rate is by far the best on the Colts.

Wynn's hitting last night was instrumental in dealing Drysdale his 12th defeat against 13 victories. Ex-Dodger Dick Farrell beat his former teammates for the third time this year with a six-hitter that brought his season record to 9-8.

OTHER GAMES

Elsewhere in the N.L., the Cardinals edged the Phillies, 3-2, the Reds blanked the Pirates, 3-0, the Cubs outlasted the Giants, 12-11 in 10 innings, and the Braves beat the Mets, 8-0, in the opener but dropped the 11-inning nightcap, 3-1.

In the American League, the Orioles downed the Yankees, 5-3, the Tigers defeated the Indians, 10-9, the Twins trounced the Athletics, 10-3, the White Sox topped the Angels, 5-1, and the Red Sox won their opener with the Senators, 5-0, but lost the nightcap, 4-3.

The Cardinals handed Dennis Bennett of the Phils his first defeat after three straight victories when they scored two runs on a wild throw by shortstop Ruben Amaro. Ray Sadecki picked up his seventh victory although he needed help in the ninth.

Jim Maloney won his sixth straight game and 17th of the season for the Reds with a four-hitter over the Pirates. Maloney struck out 11 and was home free after Vada Pinson hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning off Don Cardwell.

Terra Linda Girl, 15, Earns National Roller Skating Title

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Nina Howe, 15, of Terra Linda, already a winner of a national championship this week, will be trying for a coveted gold medal tomorrow in the North American Roller Skating championships in Portland, Ore.

Nina, a sophomore at Terra Linda High School, teamed with Marc Parker of Sacramento earlier this week to win the championship of the Junior Dance division over 26 other regional champion teams from all parts of the United States and Canada.

EARLIER WIN

Nina and Marc won the state and southwest regional championships earlier in July to qualify for the nationals. That competition was in Bakersfield.

Tomorrow the five-foot, two-inch blonde and her 15-year-old skating partner will be going after the top award in the roller skating ranks, a gold medal. The pair will do a series of six dances and will be judged "against the book" by professional skaters. To win the top award, they must perform perfectly in all six dances.

LONG COMMUTE

Both Nina and Marc commute from their homes to Walnut Creek three times per week for instruction from Bill Chew who operates the Skate Haven Roller Rink. They have been doing this since last September as the road to a national championship is not an easy one, they have found out. From Nina's home at 12 Trellis Drive in Terra Linda, it's a distance of 40 miles to Walnut Creek.

Nina comes from a roller-skating family, with an older sister, Jackie, 16, and a younger sister, Marilyn 12, all with numerous trophies and awards. All three girls started their skating careers at the "ripe old age" of five.

Proud mother and father of the three girls are Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Howe. Howe is an estimator and project manager for a mechanical contracting firm in San Francisco, and his wife is secretary to County Adm. Alan Bruce.

NATIONAL CHAMPS—Nina Howe of Terra Linda and Marc Parker of Sacramento have teamed up to win the national junior dance division of the North American Amateur Roller Skating Championships in Portland, Ore

Raiders Open Slate

OAKLAND (AP)—Energetic Al Davis makes his debut as head coach of the Oakland Raiders tomorrow, mixing determination with trepidation in his assignment to lift the 1962 American Football League doormat.

As usual, the Raiders will be underdogs as they meet the Boston Patriots in the pre-season opener at Frank Youell Field.

Davis faces the task of experimenting with new players while creating sufficient interest in his club to build a solid core of fans. In 1962 a crowd of 10,000 was above average at Youell Field.

"Let me say, first," Davis asserted, "that this first exhibition game will in no way indicate how we approach the regular season.

"For instance, we know Art Powell can catch the passes. But we must try to find some other players who will help us through the season. We have to build our running game.

"I do think our offensive line, if we can come up with one more tackle, will be comparable to any in the league. The defense is thin and needs help at several spots. We just don't have enough people right now."

Davis has some big advantages over past Raider coaches. For one, as both coach and general manager, he is the overall boss and the owners seem to be giving him a free hand in the development program while not expecting miracles.

For another, he has two proven quarterbacks in Cotton Davidson and Tom Flores. And some new additions to the squad, particularly Powell and offensive guard Ollie Spencer, have strengthened the attack.

It may also be an advantage for the Raiders to open against Boston, the only club they beat in 1962. They edged the Patriots 21-20 in the opening exhibition; lost 26-16 at Boston. After losing 19 straight league contests, the Raiders finally beat Boston 20-0 at Youell Field in the 1963 finale.

Boston again features the throwing of quarterback Babe Parilli, the running of Ron Burton and Larry Garron and Coach Mike Holovak has been praising the pass catching of rookie Art Graham from Boston College, the coach's alma mater.

Davis has two veteran running backs in Clem Daniels and Alan Miller but seeks strength to back them. The only rookie he'll have in the starting array will be Bill Leeka, former UCLA All-Coast tackle, who decided to try football at 25 and will open at right linebacker.

The kickoff is scheduled at 1:30 p.m.

Mrs. Dawson Is Double Winner

Mrs. E. N. Dawson took all the honors Thursday at the Marin Golf and Country Club when she won the Trophy Day action with a 94-23-71 and won the Low Putt competition with a score of 29.

BUILDERS, S.A. MERCHANTS BATTLE FOR LOOP TOP SPOT

Three games are on tap tomorrow in the seventh week of the Marin Semi-Pro Baseball League, with the fourth scheduled game already forfeited.

Billings-Hutchison Builders (5-1) and the San Anselmo Merchants (4-1) will meet in the headline attraction at 1:30 p.m. at Albert Field, San Rafael.

Presidio, also with a 5-1 record, will take on the Mill Valley Merchants (2-4) at 1:30 p.m. on the Project 17 field in Mill Valley, and the Ongaro Plumbers (2-3) will battle the Novato Knickerbockers (3-2) at 3:30 p.m. on the San Anselmo Memorial Field.

The Dons of Marin team, with a 1-4 record before this weekend, was awarded a forfeit win over the Bermuda Palms (0-6) as the Palms team is unable to field a full team.

Scheduled to take the mound for San Anselmo is left-hander Vince Pallavicini who will be opposed by either Bob DeRosa or Jerry Walters.

Heading the batting parade for San Anselmo will be John Bennoit and Tom McGee. Billings-Hutchison's batting attack is led by Ernie Demattei, Larry Smoot and Dick Spackman, all hitting over the .400 mark.

Either John Jones or Ray Weiss will take to the hill for Presidio against Mill Valley's Fred Thurman, former minor league hurler. For Ongaro, Jack Sovereign will probably get the nod for mound duty against Novato's Ken Grayson.

The meet pitted eight of the top AAU swimming teams in northern California in the annual championship climax to the summer league dual meet schedule. The Marin Pirates squad was the lone Marin team in the tourney.

Candy finished second in the girls 13 and 14 200-yard breaststroke event with a time of 1:17.9. Her qualifying time of 1:17.1 was a new meet record, breaking the old mark of 1:18.6.

Robin was the high point swimmer of the Pirates, winning the 9 and 10 boys 50-yard breaststroke in 39.3, placing fourth in the 50-yard freestyle at 32.0, fourth in the 100-yard individual medley in 1:27.0 and fifth in the 50-yard backstroke, 39.4.

Jackie Robinson Joins Pickets

NEW YORK (AP)—Jackie Robinson, the first Negro major league baseball player and a former star with the old Brooklyn Dodgers, took a turn on the picket line yesterday at the Brooklyn construction site where demonstrators are demanding more jobs for Negroes and Puerto Ricans on publicly financed building projects.

Robinson, a restaurant chain executive, carried a placard reading: "Jobs for everyone. If not jobs, then jail." He marched for 10 minutes at the downstate medical center site.

MONTICELLO, N. Y. (AP)—An unidentified bettor won $37,116.10 on the twin double at Monticello Raceway last night, believed to be the highest ever at a harness track in New York State. The winning combination was 7, 1, 6 and 5 for the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth races.

NET TOURNEY REGISTRATION ENDS MONDAY

Registration deadline for the Marin Junior Tennis Tournament, sponsored jointly by the Independent-Journal and the San Rafael Recreation and Park Department, is Monday, 5 p.m.

Entries for the tourney may be telephoned or written to Joseph D. Rodota, recreation and park director at the San Rafael City Hall.

The tourney, open to boys and girls 18 and under, will be held Aug. 9, 10, 15, 16 and 17 at the tennis courts at Albert Field in San Rafael.

S.R. Driver Can Move Up In Standings

It wouldn't take too much for Jack Dempsey of San Rafael to jump about three places in the point standings at the NASCAR-sanctioned stock car races at the Petaluma Fairgrounds tonight at 8 p.m.

Dempsey leads the San Rafael contingent who enter the races with 238 points, good for 10th place in the overall track standings.

The San Rafael driver has been hanging around 10th place for the past three weeks. He finished 17th in last week's main event after getting hung up in a three-car spin.

In standings released by NASCAR headquarters Thursday, Dempsey is just 29 points behind the seventh place driver, Dick Larrimore of San Jose.

Santa Rosa's Win Beaver still leads the overall point standings. Beaver boosted his first place lead by eight points finishing 11th in last week's main event, while runnerup Butch Bishop of Menlo Park couldn't do any better than 15th.

San Rafael's Charlie Louwaert is still in the top 20 and while he's beginning to take his share of heat races, he hasn't been able to score in the main event.

It's Early For Football But We Have Already Had Two Servings

RANDOL

Sweet charity must be served, but I'll never be reconciled to football in mid-summer. No matter; its with us and I'll just have to get used to it. Relax and enjoy it, as it were.

The month of August busted in with two big servings. First the Shrine High School All Stars, and then last night the Packers and the College All-Stars from Chicago. If nothing else, we were given a great study in contrasts in age, experience, desire and purpose.

Somehow, the kids in Los Angeles had it all over the pros when it comes to sincerity. Every one of those stalwarts was risking his dreams of college glory for the sake of one exhibition. Whatever was lacking in experience and execution was made up in spirit.

The pro contest in Chicago was the more exciting by far, but you couldn't help smelling the money dripping out of the seams. No bunch of pro rookies is ever going to manhandle a team like the champion Green Bay Packers when they are playing for keeps.

Off this one game the College All-Stars could enter the National Football League tomorrow and be a contender in either conference. Somebody forgot to tell the rookie pros, however, that the Green Bay monsters were unbeatable, so they went out and rubbed the Packer's noses in their puddled reputation.

Coach Red Hickey and his San Francisco 49ers were interested spectators by way of TV. And there must have been a room full of red faces thinking of the example set by a bunch of fuzzy-faced All-Stars. The rookies showed me better blocking, tackling, running and downright hustle than I have seen on ANY professional team in years.

It is a shame that these kids have to be broken up and scattered to the various professional squads. And the irony of it all is that only about half these rookies will make the grade in pro ball. Just last year I suggested that all pro clubs be REQUIRED to keep six to eight rookies; I still think such a rule would breathe new life into a game that is becoming jaded.

The Shrine game gave us a picture of things to come. There seems to be no limit to improvement, as the high school grads seem to get bigger and better every year. There must be some mighty potent vitamins on the market today.

The 49ers had five men on the All-Star squad that took the Packers, and you can bet that Coach Hickey will welcome them to camp next week. Only one man really got a chance to show his mettle, and he looks a cinch to make the grade. That would be Chuck Sieminski, the big 257-pound lineman.

Kermit Alexander dropped the pigskin on the one big chance he had to return a punt, but was saved by a quick whistle. Don't worry about this boy, however, as he has all the moves to be a great one. End Floyd Dean dropped one pass but his 6-3, 248 pound frame should be a welcome addition.

Great pass-catcher that he is, I worry about end Hugh Campbell from Washington State. I don't see how his comparatively small frame can take the pounding that pro football produces. As for Maryland's Walter Rock, I don't know any more than you do. At least, his 6-5 and 245-pound body should take up some space on anybody's bench.

It would be nice to look forward to a great year for the 49ers, but I don't like the air of uneasiness and unrest that has been in the background for a couple of years. When the axe falls it will cut a mighty swathe, and names and reputations will mean nothing.

U.S. Track Team Opens Meet With England Today

LONDON (AP)—If the American track team can shake off its airplane legs in time, it can wind up its European tour with a flourish here against a lightly regarded British squad today and Monday.

The Americans, who flew in late yesterday from Hannover, Germany, where they demolished a good West German team, 141-82, last Wednesday and Thursday, are fit enough to run, but may be too track-weary to threaten any world marks.

The teams will rest Sunday—a day off for sports in Britain—and resume on Monday. Competition is at White City.

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Nina Howe, 15, of Terra Linda, already a winner of a national championship this week, will be trying for a coveted gold medal tomorrow in the North American Roller Skating championships in Portland, Ore.

Nina, a sophomore at Terra Linda High School, teamed with Marc Parker of Sacramento earlier this week to win the championship of the Junior Dance division over 26 other regional champion teams from all parts of the United States and Canada.

EARLIER WIN

Nina and Marc won the state and southwest regional championships earlier in July to qualify for the nationals. That competition was in Bakersfield.

Tomorrow the five-foot, two-inch blonde and her 15-year-old skating partner will be going after the top award in the roller skating ranks, a gold medal. The pair will do a series of six dances and will be judged "against the book" by professional skaters. To win the top award, they must perform perfectly in all six dances.

LONG COMMUTE

Both Nina and Marc commute from their homes to Walnut Creek three times per week for instruction from Bill Chew who operates the Skate Haven Roller Rink. They have been doing this since last September as the road to a national championship is not an easy one, they have found out. From Nina's home at 12 Trellis Drive in Terra Linda, it's a distance of 40 miles to Walnut Creek.

Nina comes from a roller-skating family, with an older sister, Jackie, 16, and a younger sister, Marilyn 12, all with numerous trophies and awards. All three girls started their skating careers at the "ripe old age" of five.

Proud mother and father of the three girls are Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Howe. Howe is an estimator and project manager for a mechanical contracting firm in San Francisco, and his wife is secretary to County Adm. Alan Bruce.

NATIONAL CHAMPS—Nina Howe of Terra Linda and Marc Parker of Sacramento have teamed up to win the national junior dance division of the North American Amateur Roller Skating Championships in Portland, Ore

In standings released by NASCAR headquarters Thursday, Dempsey is just 29 points behind the seventh place driver, Dick Larrimore of San Jose.

Santa Rosa's Win Beaver still leads the overall point standings. Beaver boosted his first place lead by eight points finishing 11th in last week's main event, while runnerup Butch Bishop of Menlo Park couldn't do any better than 15th.

San Rafael's Charlie Louwaert is still in the top 20 and while he's beginning to take his share of heat races, he hasn't been able to score in the main event.

It's Early For Football But We Have Already Had Two Servings

RANDOL

Sweet charity must be served, but I'll never be reconciled to football in mid-summer. No matter; its with us and I'll just have to get used to it. Relax and enjoy it, as it were.

The month of August busted in with two big servings. First the Shrine High School All Stars, and then last night the Packers and the College All-Stars from Chicago. If nothing else, we were given a great study in contrasts in age, experience, desire and purpose.

Somehow, the kids in Los Angeles had it all over the pros when it comes to sincerity. Every one of those stalwarts was risking his dreams of college glory for the sake of one exhibition. Whatever was lacking in experience and execution was made up in spirit.

The pro contest in Chicago was the more exciting by far, but you couldn't help smelling the money dripping out of the seams. No bunch of pro rookies is ever going to manhandle a team like the champion Green Bay Packers when they are playing for keeps.

Off this one game the College All-Stars could enter the National Football League tomorrow and be a contender in either conference. Somebody forgot to tell the rookie pros, however, that the Green Bay monsters were unbeatable, so they went out and rubbed the Packer's noses in their puddled reputation.

Coach Red Hickey and his San Francisco 49ers were interested spectators by way of TV. And there must have been a room full of red faces thinking of the example set by a bunch of fuzzy-faced All-Stars. The rookies showed me better blocking, tackling, running and downright hustle than I have seen on ANY professional team in years.

It is a shame that these kids have to be broken up and scattered to the various professional squads. And the irony of it all is that only about half these rookies will make the grade in pro ball. Just last year I suggested that all pro clubs be REQUIRED to keep six to eight rookies; I still think such a rule would breathe new life into a game that is becoming jaded.

The Shrine game gave us a picture of things to come. There seems to be no limit to improvement, as the high school grads seem to get bigger and better every year. There must be some mighty potent vitamins on the market today.

The 49ers had five men on the All-Star squad that took the Packers, and you can bet that Coach Hickey will welcome them to camp next week. Only one man really got a chance to show his mettle, and he looks a cinch to make the grade. That would be Chuck Sieminski, the big 257-pound lineman.

Kermit Alexander dropped the pigskin on the one big chance he had to return a punt, but was saved by a quick whistle. Don't worry about this boy, however, as he has all the moves to be a great one. End Floyd Dean dropped one pass but his 6-3, 248 pound frame should be a welcome addition.

Great pass-catcher that he is, I worry about end Hugh Campbell from Washington State. I don't see how his comparatively small frame can take the pounding that pro football produces. As for Maryland's Walter Rock, I don't know any more than you do. At least, his 6-5 and 245-pound body should take up some space on anybody's bench.

It would be nice to look forward to a great year for the 49ers, but I don't like the air of uneasiness and unrest that has been in the background for a couple of years. When the axe falls it will cut a mighty swathe, and names and reputations will mean nothing.

U.S. Track Team Opens Meet With England Today

LONDON (AP)—If the American track team can shake off its airplane legs in time, it can wind up its European tour with a flourish here against a lightly regarded British squad today and Monday.

The Americans, who flew in late yesterday from Hannover, Germany, where they demolished a good West German team, 141-82, last Wednesday and Thursday, are fit enough to run, but may be too track-weary to threaten any world marks.

The teams will rest Sunday—a day off for sports in Britain—and resume on Monday. Competition is at White City.

Raiders Open Slate

As usual, the Raiders will be underdogs as they meet the Boston Patriots in the pre-season opener at Frank Youell Field.

Davis faces the task of experimenting with new players while creating sufficient interest in his club to build a solid core of fans. In 1962 a crowd of 10,000 was above average at Youell Field.

"Let me say, first," Davis asserted, "that this first exhibition game will in no way indicate how we approach the regular season.

"For instance, we know Art Powell can catch the passes. But we must try to find some other players who will help us through the season. We have to build our running game.

"I do think our offensive line, if we can come up with one more tackle, will be comparable to any in the league. The defense is thin and needs help at several spots. We just don't have enough people right now."

Davis has some big advantages over past Raider coaches. For one, as both coach and general manager, he is the overall boss and the owners seem to be giving him a free hand in the development program while not expecting miracles.

For another, he has two proven quarterbacks in Cotton Davidson and Tom Flores. And some new additions to the squad, particularly Powell and offensive guard Ollie Spencer, have strengthened the attack.

It may also be an advantage for the Raiders to open against Boston, the only club they beat in 1962. They edged the Patriots 21-20 in the opening exhibition; lost 26-16 at Boston. After losing 19 straight league contests, the Raiders finally beat Boston 20-0 at Youell Field in the 1963 finale.

Boston again features the throwing of quarterback Babe Parilli, the running of Ron Burton and Larry Garron and Coach Mike Holovak has been praising the pass catching of rookie Art Graham from Boston College, the coach's alma mater.

Davis has two veteran running backs in Clem Daniels and Alan Miller but seeks strength to back them. The only rookie he'll have in the starting array will be Bill Leeka, former UCLA All-Coast tackle, who decided to try football at 25 and will open at right linebacker.

The kickoff is scheduled at 1:30 p.m.

Church Takes Civil Rights Lead Finally

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

"Organized religion has thus far played a relatively minor role in the struggle for racial justice in America."

Those words were written, by this reporter, a little more than six months ago.

They are no longer true.

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish organizations are working together to muster public support for passage of civil rights legislation.

Ministers, priests and rabbis are marching alongside Negroes in non-violent demonstrations against segregation. Some have gone to jail.

In Washington, Chicago, Detroit and many other communities, tri-faith councils have been established to promote equality of opportunity in employment and housing.

During the past few weeks, at least 30 Catholic bishops have issued pastoral letters attacking segregation as an unchristian denial of the dignity which God has conferred on every human creatures.

The presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church has appealed to all Episcopalians to walk picket lines, give money to Negro organizations, and otherwise demonstrate the church's "identification with those who are victims of oppression."

The United Presbyterian Church has created a "commission on religion and race" to stir Presbyterian laymen into emulating the example of their chief executive officer, Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, who was arrested July 4 for participating in a protest against segregation.

The Synagogue Council of America has set up a "task force" of rabbis, who are available for picketing duty and protest marches.

The National Council of Churches is urging white Christians—both clergy and laymen—to join the "March on Washington" which Negro organizations have scheduled for Aug. 28.

The list could run on and on. A similar ferment of activity is underway in many religious organizations besides those named.

Not all their white members are happy about it. In fact, some are quite vocally unhappy to see the church "taking sides" in a social revolution.

Religious leaders are well aware that commitment to the Negro's cause may cost churches and synagogues a few members and a great deal of financial support.

They say, however, that the time has come for religious institutions to pay whatever price is necessary to demonstrate the sincerity of their conviction that God created all men, regardless of race or color, with equal rights and dignity.

This "damn-the-torpedoes" spirit was expressed in a recent statement by the general board of the National Council of Churches. It said:

"Now is the time for action—even costly action that may jeopardize the organizational goals and institutional structures of the church."

What caused church and synagogue leaders to move suddenly from timidity to bold action on racial problems?

Three factors seem to have contributed.

One was the National Conference on Religion and Race held in Chicago last January. It was the first time in history that Protestants, Catholics and Jews had met together to examine their role in race relations. They went away from the meeting with a deep sense of shame about the past record, and a joint determination to prove that religion is neither indifferent nor irrelevant to what they called "America's number one moral problem."

Close on the heels of the Chicago meeting came the demonstrations against segregation in Birmingham, Ala. The already-sore consciences of many white Christians and Jews were sharply pricked by the spectacle of Negroes being doused by fire hoses, attacked by police dogs, and herded into jails.

The nationwide wave of demonstrations which followed Birmingham was the clincher. Religious leaders realized that Negro patience was exhausted, and that it was no longer a question of whether racial barriers should come down rapidly or gradually, but a question of whether they would come down peacefully or violently.

"Birmingham and what followed has confronted the nation with a near-revolution by Negro citizens," said Mathew Ahman, executive director of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice. "It has also confronted religious men with the necessity of choice. The time for religious fence-sitting is over.

"Neither the Kennedy administration, nor massive civil rights legislation, nor the Supreme Court, can forge the necessary national consensus that integration is a good thing. Only organized religion can forge this consensus; and it can do so only if it is willing to go all the way.

"We either accept the leadership that is ours, or we forfeit the right to be trusted."

Lutheran Sisters Adopt Uniforms

BALTIMORE (AP)—After looking over various models and extensive discussion, sisters of the newly merged Baltimore and Philadelphia motherhouses of Lutheran deaconesses have adopted the same design for dress, hat and cross.

In the past, sisters of the two Lutheran Church in America motherhouses have used different uniforms and crosses. Sister Mildred Winter said selection of the new habit, a simple classic dress, either blue, black or gray, and the hat, similar to those worn by airline stewardesses, and without veil, was difficult. She added:

"The extremes of age among our sisters is the problem. Obviously what is becoming to a young girl with a halo of curls may not be becoming to an older woman who wears her hair straight or in a bun."

Student Leads Service

Rev. John Strawhorn, a third year student at the Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry, will conduct both services tomorrow at the First Baptist Church of San Rafael, filling in for Rev. Wallace M. Hough Jr. who is on vacation.

STREETCAR NAMED 'HOPE' — Rev. James A. Kearse addresses members of the congregation of the First Baptist Church in Lanham, Md. in their new church. It is a reclaimed streetcar which was converted for church use at about the cost of a new automobile. (UPI Telephoto)

Not End Of Line For This Streetcar

By JOHN H. MILLER
United Press International

LANHAM, Md. (UPI)—The streetcar, like the buffalo and the whooping crane, is disappearing from the American scene.

It has given way to more efficient, if less picturesque, means of public transportation.

But what happens to old streetcars? Are they relegated to the junk heap?

In 1947, Tennessee Williams wrote a Pulitzer prize-winning play titled, "A Streetcar Named Desire." A story of human strife set in New Orleans, the play was little concerned with streetcars.

For the streetcar is a church.

Rev. James A. Kearse, who recently founded the First Baptist Church in Lanham, had no church edifice and planned to deliver his first sermon to his 35-member congregation in an army surplus tent.

But the week before the service the heavens grew dark and a violent rain and wind storm tore the tent to shreds. The first sermon was delivered under an oak tree.

A few days later, the saddened preacher was driving into Washington when he noticed a streetcar being hauled into a carbarn owned by D. C. Transit Co., the local bus line.

Kearse brightened.

"At that moment I had my revelation," he remembered. "This was the answer from the Lord."

The preacher made a telephone to the bus company. He was told that the last 200 streetcars in town had been sold to a Washington radio personality, Milton Q. Ford, and his attorney, Alvin Newmyer Jr.

Streetcars had been clanging their way through Washington streets for 100 years but the last one had been retired Jan. 28, 1962, in favor of air-conditioned buses.

Kearse phoned Ford and Newmyer, who had formed what they called Trolley Corp. in nearby Bladenburg, Md.

"Can you make one of those streetcars into a church?" the minister asked.

"Of course," came the reply.

One month from that day, a new "church" stood on the corner of Elm Street and Railroad Avenue.

The undercarriage of the remodeled streetcar was gone. The new Baptist church had been given a new coat of off-white paint.

Half of the windows contain stained glass; the other half depict Biblical themes.

A custom-made pulpit was installed at one end behind a small organ. The church was wired for electrical heating, air conditioning and a public address system which carries taped organ music before the service. There is seating for 50 persons, with extra space provided for 20 folding chairs. There's even a cloakroom.

The cost? About that of an average automobile.

The streetcar church was dedicated July 7 by Rep. Carlton R. Stickles (D-Md.). He applauded the idea of transforming something as seemingly useless as an old streetcar into something as useful as a church.

To Rev. Kearse, certainly the best use for an old streetcar is as a church.

His may not be called "Desire" but it could well be called "Hope."

Bethlehem, USA, Has Shrine In Deep Cave

By DAN PERKES

Since 1956, Benedictine fathers and monks of Conception Abbey of Conception, Mo., have been building living quarters, repairing washed out roads and constructing a shrine at Crystal Cave.

The 180 acres of land and the cave were a gift to the monks from Louis Storm.

"Christ was born in a stable in a cave and the Church first took hold in the Rome catacombs during 300 years of persecution," Father Gilbert explains.

"St. Benedict, patron saint of cave explorers, lived in a cave for three years before he founded the famous order of Monte Cassino Abbey," he adds.

Two priests are permanently in residence at the shrine. They are assisted by laymen who are oblates of Conception Abbey.

During the busy summer tourist season, Father Gilbert says, additional monks are supplied and numerous laymen from the U.S. and Canada donate their time.

The shrine, built near the entrance, is deep enough to provide an atmosphere of warmth and serenity.

Walks are electricallly lighted and a guide explains the formations and the various rooms along the way.

Father Gilbert estimates that about 10,000 visitors a year come to the shrine. There is no admission charge.

"But we do ask everyone who visits us to say a prayer for peace," he says. "We feel everyone's prayers are needed for world peace."

Services are held at the shrine twice each morning during the summer and on special religious days throughout the year. Special Easter and Christmas services are attended by residents throughout the Black Hills and surrounding states.

The monks must maintain their independence by some means of self-support. Father Gilbert chose to be a printer. Since he has been at Bethlehem, he has printed cards for Christmas and birthdays and offers some of them for sale to visitors.

During the yuletide season, he gets thousands of orders for Christmas cards requesting the be postmarked from Bethlehem.

Law Bans Missionaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Clyde W. Taylor, secretary of public affairs for the National Association of Evangelicals, says that the Sudan's new Missionary Societies Act, prohibiting missionaries from working among people except of their own faith and restricting them to specific areas, is one of the "most repressive laws against Christianity outside the Iron Curtain."

Their Mission In Yellowstone

By PAUL ALBRIGHT

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP)—The thousands of sunburned tourists pouring into this Wyoming wonderland of geysers, waterfalls and wildlife are finding a dedicated band of young persons striving to bring the teachings of Christ closer through the natural miracles around them.

"We try to help the visitor see nature through the cross of Christ," explained Rev. John A. Lee, 27, resident minister in the park. "Through religious help we want to make their leasure hours here as responsible and creative as their working hours at home."

Lee, a Methodist, said he feels a challenge and satisfaction in tending the cares of the supposedly carefree tourist. He heads a group of 36 college and seminary students who are stationed around the vast park.

Each Sunday through Labor Day, the "worker-witnesses" hold 16 interdenominational worship services. There are Bible schools, discussion groups and recreation programs during the weekdays at the eight most populous areas of Yellowstone.

Lee termed the program of Christian work in the park a growing success. The program, now incorporated in most of the national parks, was started first at Yellowstone in 1951 by a group of Princeton seminarians working for the summer.

Last summer 20,000 park visitors attended Sunday services.

By far the biggest counseling activity is for the hundreds of summer employes — most of them college students.

The young Christian workers, selected by the National Council of Churches, put in a 48-hour work week, and their job is far more varied, rugged and, on occasion, distasteful than for average men of the cloth.

"When a minister has to empty garbage cans, he keeps out of the ivory tower," Lee said.

He explained when religious workers do the same camp chores as tourists, it is easier to remain on an equal footing with the mobile congregations.

While the program headed by Lee is the largest, it is by no means the only religious work in Yellowstone.

Two priests celebrate Catholic Masses in the park each week. No rabbis are scheduled in Yellowstone, but there are representatives of the Mormon, Christian Science and Seventh Day Adventist faiths.

Lee's own group includes two major synods of Lutherans, Southern Baptists, American Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists and Episcopalians.

BILLBOARDS TO GIVE CHURCHES TOP BILLING

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptist headquarters notes that members in two states have made plans for "highway evangelism."

In Tulsa, Okla., the Baptist Brotherhood is financing billboards, urging church attendance, on every major highway entering the city. In Jackson, Miss., the Mississippi Baptist Convention planned similar signs on main highways entering the state at the state line.

The outdoor, come-as-you-are service in the wooded canyon behind the church has reportedly been well attended. It will continue through August.

Women Kept Off Of Church Vestry

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Virginia Episcopalians have rejected a proposed change in canon law that would have permitted women to serve on the vestry of their churches.

Church Takes Civil Rights Lead Finally

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

"Organized religion has thus far played a relatively minor role in the struggle for racial justice in America."

Those words were written, by this reporter, a little more than six months ago.

They are no longer true.

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish organizations are working together to muster public support for passage of civil rights legislation.

Ministers, priests and rabbis are marching alongside Negroes in non-violent demonstrations against segregation. Some have gone to jail.

In Washington, Chicago, Detroit and many other communities, tri-faith councils have been established to promote equality of opportunity in employment and housing.

During the past few weeks, at least 30 Catholic bishops have issued pastoral letters attacking segregation as an unchristian denial of the dignity which God has conferred on every human creatures.

The presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church has appealed to all Episcopalians to walk picket lines, give money to Negro organizations, and otherwise demonstrate the church's "identification with those who are victims of oppression."

The United Presbyterian Church has created a "commission on religion and race" to stir Presbyterian laymen into emulating the example of their chief executive officer, Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, who was arrested July 4 for participating in a protest against segregation.

The Synagogue Council of America has set up a "task force" of rabbis, who are available for picketing duty and protest marches.

The National Council of Churches is urging white Christians—both clergy and laymen—to join the "March on Washington" which Negro organizations have scheduled for Aug. 28.

The list could run on and on. A similar ferment of activity is underway in many religious organizations besides those named.

Not all their white members are happy about it. In fact, some are quite vocally unhappy to see the church "taking sides" in a social revolution.

Religious leaders are well aware that commitment to the Negro's cause may cost churches and synagogues a few members and a great deal of financial support.

They say, however, that the time has come for religious institutions to pay whatever price is necessary to demonstrate the sincerity of their conviction that God created all men, regardless of race or color, with equal rights and dignity.

This "damn-the-torpedoes" spirit was expressed in a recent statement by the general board of the National Council of Churches. It said:

"Now is the time for action—even costly action that may jeopardize the organizational goals and institutional structures of the church."

What caused church and synagogue leaders to move suddenly from timidity to bold action on racial problems?

Three factors seem to have contributed.

One was the National Conference on Religion and Race held in Chicago last January. It was the first time in history that Protestants, Catholics and Jews had met together to examine their role in race relations. They went away from the meeting with a deep sense of shame about the past record, and a joint determination to prove that religion is neither indifferent nor irrelevant to what they called "America's number one moral problem."

Close on the heels of the Chicago meeting came the demonstrations against segregation in Birmingham, Ala. The already-sore consciences of many white Christians and Jews were sharply pricked by the spectacle of Negroes being doused by fire hoses, attacked by police dogs, and herded into jails.

The nationwide wave of demonstrations which followed Birmingham was the clincher. Religious leaders realized that Negro patience was exhausted, and that it was no longer a question of whether racial barriers should come down rapidly or gradually, but a question of whether they would come down peacefully or violently.

"Birmingham and what followed has confronted the nation with a near-revolution by Negro citizens," said Mathew Ahman, executive director of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice. "It has also confronted religious men with the necessity of choice. The time for religious fence-sitting is over.

"Neither the Kennedy administration, nor massive civil rights legislation, nor the Supreme Court, can forge the necessary national consensus that integration is a good thing. Only organized religion can forge this consensus; and it can do so only if it is willing to go all the way.

"We either accept the leadership that is ours, or we forfeit the right to be trusted."

Lutheran Sisters Adopt Uniforms

BALTIMORE (AP)—After looking over various models and extensive discussion, sisters of the newly merged Baltimore and Philadelphia motherhouses of Lutheran deaconesses have adopted the same design for dress, hat and cross.

In the past, sisters of the two Lutheran Church in America motherhouses have used different uniforms and crosses. Sister Mildred Winter said selection of the new habit, a simple classic dress, either blue, black or gray, and the hat, similar to those worn by airline stewardesses, and without veil, was difficult. She added:

"The extremes of age among our sisters is the problem. Obviously what is becoming to a young girl with a halo of curls may not be becoming to an older woman who wears her hair straight or in a bun."

Student Leads Service

Rev. John Strawhorn, a third year student at the Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry, will conduct both services tomorrow at the First Baptist Church of San Rafael, filling in for Rev. Wallace M. Hough Jr. who is on vacation.

STREETCAR NAMED 'HOPE' — Rev. James A. Kearse addresses members of the congregation of the First Baptist Church in Lanham, Md. in their new church. It is a reclaimed streetcar which was converted for church use at about the cost of a new automobile. (UPI Telephoto)

Not End Of Line For This Streetcar

By JOHN H. MILLER
United Press International

It has given way to more efficient, if less picturesque, means of public transportation.

But what happens to old streetcars? Are they relegated to the junk heap?

Not necessarily.

In 1947, Tennessee Williams wrote a Pulitzer prize-winning play titled, "A Streetcar Named Desire." A story of human strife set in New Orleans, the play was little concerned with streetcars.

For the streetcar is a church.

Rev. James A. Kearse, who recently founded the First Baptist Church in Lanham, had no church edifice and planned to deliver his first sermon to his 35-member congregation in an army surplus tent.

But the week before the service the heavens grew dark and a violent rain and wind storm tore the tent to shreds. The first sermon was delivered under an oak tree.

A few days later, the saddened preacher was driving into Washington when he noticed a streetcar being hauled into a carbarn owned by D. C. Transit Co., the local bus line.

Kearse brightened.

"At that moment I had my revelation," he remembered. "This was the answer from the Lord."

The preacher made a telephone to the bus company. He was told that the last 200 streetcars in town had been sold to a Washington radio personality, Milton Q. Ford, and his attorney, Alvin Newmyer Jr.

Streetcars had been clanging their way through Washington streets for 100 years but the last one had been retired Jan. 28, 1962, in favor of air-conditioned buses.

Kearse phoned Ford and Newmyer, who had formed what they called Trolley Corp. in nearby Bladenburg, Md.

"Can you make one of those streetcars into a church?" the minister asked.

"Of course," came the reply.

One month from that day, a new "church" stood on the corner of Elm Street and Railroad Avenue.

The undercarriage of the remodeled streetcar was gone. The new Baptist church had been given a new coat of off-white paint.

Half of the windows contain stained glass; the other half depict Biblical themes.

A custom-made pulpit was installed at one end behind a small organ. The church was wired for electrical heating, air conditioning and a public address system which carries taped organ music before the service. There is seating for 50 persons, with extra space provided for 20 folding chairs. There's even a cloakroom.

The cost? About that of an average automobile.

The streetcar church was dedicated July 7 by Rep. Carlton R. Stickles (D-Md.). He applauded the idea of transforming something as seemingly useless as an old streetcar into something as useful as a church.

To Rev. Kearse, certainly the best use for an old streetcar is as a church.

His may not be called "Desire" but it could well be called "Hope."

Bethlehem, USA, Has Shrine In Deep Cave

By DAN PERKES

Since 1956, Benedictine fathers and monks of Conception Abbey of Conception, Mo., have been building living quarters, repairing washed out roads and constructing a shrine at Crystal Cave.

The 180 acres of land and the cave were a gift to the monks from Louis Storm.

"Christ was born in a stable in a cave and the Church first took hold in the Rome catacombs during 300 years of persecution," Father Gilbert explains.

"St. Benedict, patron saint of cave explorers, lived in a cave for three years before he founded the famous order of Monte Cassino Abbey," he adds.

Two priests are permanently in residence at the shrine. They are assisted by laymen who are oblates of Conception Abbey.

During the busy summer tourist season, Father Gilbert says, additional monks are supplied and numerous laymen from the U.S. and Canada donate their time.

The shrine, built near the entrance, is deep enough to provide an atmosphere of warmth and serenity.

Walks are electricallly lighted and a guide explains the formations and the various rooms along the way.

Father Gilbert estimates that about 10,000 visitors a year come to the shrine. There is no admission charge.

"But we do ask everyone who visits us to say a prayer for peace," he says. "We feel everyone's prayers are needed for world peace."

Services are held at the shrine twice each morning during the summer and on special religious days throughout the year. Special Easter and Christmas services are attended by residents throughout the Black Hills and surrounding states.

The monks must maintain their independence by some means of self-support. Father Gilbert chose to be a printer. Since he has been at Bethlehem, he has printed cards for Christmas and birthdays and offers some of them for sale to visitors.

During the yuletide season, he gets thousands of orders for Christmas cards requesting the be postmarked from Bethlehem.

Law Bans Missionaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Clyde W. Taylor, secretary of public affairs for the National Association of Evangelicals, says that the Sudan's new Missionary Societies Act, prohibiting missionaries from working among people except of their own faith and restricting them to specific areas, is one of the "most repressive laws against Christianity outside the Iron Curtain."

BILLBOARDS TO GIVE CHURCHES TOP BILLING

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptist headquarters notes that members in two states have made plans for "highway evangelism."

In Tulsa, Okla., the Baptist Brotherhood is financing billboards, urging church attendance, on every major highway entering the city. In Jackson, Miss., the Mississippi Baptist Convention planned similar signs on main highways entering the state at the state line.

Vacation Change Made In Fairfax

Oliver Berven Jr. at home in San Anselmo between classes at Lutheran Seminary, St. Paul, Minn., will conduct both the 8:30 a.m. outdoor service and the regular 11 a.m. service at Christ the Victor Lutheran Church, Fairfax, for the next three Sundays.

Rev. John Rotto, pastor, is on vacation.

The outdoor, come-as-you-are service in the wooded canyon behind the church has reportedly been well attended. It will continue through August.

GARBAGE DETAIL

Their Mission In Yellowstone

By PAUL ALBRIGHT

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP)—The thousands of sunburned tourists pouring into this Wyoming wonderland of geysers, waterfalls and wildlife are finding a dedicated band of young persons striving to bring the teachings of Christ closer through the natural miracles around them.

"We try to help the visitor see nature through the cross of Christ," explained Rev. John A. Lee, 27, resident minister in the park. "Through religious help we want to make their leasure hours here as responsible and creative as their working hours at home."

Lee, a Methodist, said he feels a challenge and satisfaction in tending the cares of the supposedly carefree tourist. He heads a group of 36 college and seminary students who are stationed around the vast park.

Each Sunday through Labor Day, the "worker-witnesses" hold 16 interdenominational worship services. There are Bible schools, discussion groups and recreation programs during the weekdays at the eight most populous areas of Yellowstone.

Lee termed the program of Christian work in the park a growing success. The program, now incorporated in most of the national parks, was started first at Yellowstone in 1951 by a group of Princeton seminarians working for the summer.

Last summer 20,000 park visitors attended Sunday services.

By far the biggest counseling activity is for the hundreds of summer employes — most of them college students.

The young Christian workers, selected by the National Council of Churches, put in a 48-hour work week, and their job is far more varied, rugged and, on occasion, distasteful than for average men of the cloth.

"When a minister has to empty garbage cans, he keeps out of the ivory tower," Lee said.

He explained when religious workers do the same camp chores as tourists, it is easier to remain on an equal footing with the mobile congregations.

While the program headed by Lee is the largest, it is by no means the only religious work in Yellowstone.

Two priests celebrate Catholic Masses in the park each week. No rabbis are scheduled in Yellowstone, but there are representatives of the Mormon, Christian Science and Seventh Day Adventist faiths.

Lee's own group includes two major synods of Lutherans, Southern Baptists, American Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists and Episcopalians.

Women Kept Off Of Church Vestry

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Virginia Episcopalians have rejected a proposed change in canon law that would have permitted women to serve on the vestry of their churches.

Landing Of Drake To Be Fair Exhibit

The landing of Sir Francis Drake at Nova Albion in June of 1579 will be depicted in Marin County's exhibit at the State Fair in Sacramento Aug. 28 through Sept. 9.

The display will be before a mural of Drake's Bay and the beach where Drake is believed to have careened the Golden Hinde and camped under the curious eyes of the friendly Miwok Indians.

The display will also include a mannequin of Drake, a model of the Golden Hinde and some text telling of the landing. In addition it will include the "plate of brass" or a replica of the plate that Drake left commemorating the landing.

Mrs. Marcelle B. McCoy of Sleepy Hollow, coordinator for the exhibit, said showing the real plate would mean getting a half million dollars in insurance. The plate is kept at the Bancroft Library at University of California, Berkeley.

Mrs. McCoy said she hopes to be able to have Coast Guardsmen stand a guard over the plate. This would reduce the premiums, she said. She said the guarding and the cost of insurance is still being studied.

The exhibit has been designed by Rudolph Theurkoff of Sausalito with much help from his assistant, Stanley Irway, Mrs. McCoy said.

The exhibit will compete with other counties at the fair. Marin County is entering under the historical category, Mrs. McCoy said. She did not know how many other exhibits there will be in the same category.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

It's Nice To Have Sun Tan But Overexposure Can Be Harmful

VAN DELLEN

The virtues of the sun have been extoled for so many generations, we feel a little guilty criticizing the old boy. The heat and light he gives, especially the health producing ultraviolet rays, are desirable but the other side of the ledger is not so pleasing. The sun is capable of burning and overexposure encourages a variety of skin disorders, including cancer.

Many people head for the beach the first warm day to begin the tanning process. It is the same old story in that some will limit the sunbath whereas others will stay until they look like lobsters.

STUDIES HAVE shown that on a clear day at noon in June the average person will become slightly pink after a 20 minute exposure, a vivid red after 50 minutes, and burned at 100 minutes. Blonds and redheads are more sensitive; brunets less so. Vice versa is true when it comes to tanning in that the darker skinned develop a deeper tan. They are able to manufacture more melanin (pigment) which is responsible for the mahogany color.

Sunburn not only is painful and disabling but destroys skin cells and leaves microscopic scars. The epidermis also is damaged by constant exposure to the sun, such as occurs in southerners. It becomes dry, wrinkled, and weatherbeaten. Statistics show that skin cancers are more common in these persons.

IT IS INTERESTING to speculate on why those living in North Africa and Asia Minor cover themselves completely from head to foot. It may be cooler to dress this way but it also is possible they learned centuries ago that too much sun harmed the skin.

The best policy is to take a sensible attitude toward the sun. Those who do not wish to cover up can apply one of many ointments that act as chemical parasols. These include zinc oxide, menthol salicylate, phenol salicylate, p-aminobezoate, the cinnamates, digalloyl trioleate, titanium dioxide, bentonite powder, or benzophenone. They must be applied at frequent intervals because they are likely to wash off when swimming or rolling in the sand.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

BEDWETTING HOUSEHOLD

I. W. writes: When can I expect to see any change in the bedwetting habits of my children, aged 17, 13, and 5? This is a problem that makes me feel I could leave home. I have tried all the mechanical and other suggestions, which gave no help. What is the next step?

REPLY

Consult a psychiatrist and cooperate with him, even though he may suggest that the parents rather than the children need help.

HAND SHAKES

S. J. S. writes: Is there a medicine I can take to prevent my hands from shaking when I eat out?

REPLY

A sedative may help, or perhaps a cocktail, provided trembling is not the result of too much drinking. I assume you know why the hands shake.

Students Tour I-J, KTIM Radio

Four pupils from the International Tutoring Services School got a bonus yesterday at the close of the six-week summer session . . . a tour of the Independent-Journal and Radio Station KTIM.

After their tour all agreed they were impressed, but each added his own particular comment.

"I expected the Independent-Journal would be bigger," said Patty Tawns of 149 Manor Drive, Mill Valley.

Gary Price of 581 Arlington Circle, Novato, thought the tour was worthwhile "because it isn't everybody who gets to see what I saw."

Mark Batten of 29 Mercury Avenue, Belveron Gardens, said "I thought the press was the most interesting thing there. The rolls that they use for the news are most interesting."

Summing up the feeling of the group was Michael Fowler of Building C-30, Marin City, who said, "All of it impressed me."

The pupils were accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. David Capitolo of 204 Adrian Way, San Rafael.

About 20 pupils attended the summer session of the school, headed by director George H. Gregg. Aside from the summer sessions, the school offers private tutoring throughout the year for students from elementary through college classes.

The school, at 538 Fourth Street, San Rafael, will start in "intensive" two-week summer clinic Aug. 19, Gregg reported.

Junior Architect Wins First Prize

Jerry Kazakes, 17, of 1810 Vistazo West in Tiburon has been awarded first prize in the Northern California Junior Architects competition in Oakland for his original design of a single story family residence. The competition was sponsored by the Oakland Spring Home and Garden Show.

Jerry is featured in an article in the August issue of "Seventeen" magazine, in which he discusses his architectural work. He is a senior at Redwood High School.

Adult Swimming Program Slated

Registration will be from 7 to 8 p.m. Classes for beginners and intermediates will be conducted on Mondays and Wednesdays for three weeks. The class hours are 7 to 8 and 8 to 9. The fee is $2 per person for the course.

Property Is Sold For Construction Center

Another step has been taken in the development of a San Rafael construction industry center planned more than two years ago.

L. C. Smith, president of L. C. Smith Building Supplies, Inc., announced today that the firm has purchased approximately 103,000 square feet of land adjoining the property of the Marin Builders Exchange at Belvedere and Alto Streets from H. S. Meinberger and Son and will start construction of a new building within the next three or four months.

The property is the remainder of a 2.7-acre parcel planned to be used as a center for members of the construction industry in early 1961. The 5,000-square foot building of the Marin Builders Exchange completed in July, 1962, was to have been the nucleus of the center.

Smith said he intends to erect a two-story tilt-up building west of the Builders Exchange. The building supplies firm will occupy the lower floor which will be divided into a 10,000-square foot store and a 10,000-square foot warehouse. The warehouse will rise two stories for lumber and plywood storage and the balance of the second floor will be leased out for office space.

Meinberger will construct the building which is expected to be completed within a year.

Smith presently leases two buildings at 427 Irwin Street for building supplies and floor coverings, and another at 55 De Luca Place for plywood storage. He said the new building will enable the firm to consolidate all its facilities under one roof.

Another building is expected to be erected at the northwest corner of the property at approximately the same time and others are planned to follow. Smith said he intends to develop the land according to the original design for its use, with wide areas for parking between the buildings.

Two Teachers Promoted At Three-R School

Two teachers at the San Rafael Three-R School have been promoted to the school's administrative staff, it was announced today by James W. Kirchanski, director.

They are Bruce Burgess of 49 Woodland Avenue, and Thomas Campbell of 111 Antonette Street, both San Rafael.

Burgess has been appointed head counselor, said Kirchanski, and will advise students as to their academic programs. He has been teaching history and literature at the Three-R School during the past year.

Campbell will become vice principal for the upper and lower school where he formerly taught mathematics.

Rafael Meadows Unit Incorporates

Sec. of State Frank Jordan has announced the incorporation of the San Rafael Meadows Improvement Assn.

Director Richard Fleming of 20 Corrillo Drive explained the association plans to hire some teen-agers to clean drainage ditches and do other work in the tract, and the incorporation transfers the liability from the directors to the association.

Fries At Whittier

Gregory Fries, son of Mr. and Mrs. William V. Fries of 1654 Grand Avenue, San Rafael, plans to enroll next month at Whittier College in Whittier. He will begin classes Sept. 16, after orientation activities which start eight days earlier.

Gallinas Sanitary Tax Down

The Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District has the kind of sliding tax rate that taxpayers like — downward.

In June district directors predicted that the 1962-63 rate of 60 cents per $100 valuation would be cut to 32 cents for 1963-64.

Thursday night they lowered the rate further to 25 cents because of a boost in assessed valuation. The district's budget is $100,000.

Directors also announced the resignation of Director R. N. Sundquist, who has moved from the district.

Anyone who wishes to fill the vacancy on the board should send his application to the district office, 300 Smith Road Ranch, San Rafael.

The applicant appointed will fill Sundquist's unexpired term ending in two years.

Applicants must be residents of the district, preferably property owners. "Applicants will be advised of the time and place for personal interview later this month," reported Arthur B. Carpenter, district secretary.

Handicapped Children Are Going Camping

Six handicapped children will be among the more than 50 campers starting a two-week session at Forest Farms camp in Forest Knolls tomorrow.

The campers are of age nine to 13, and the six handicapped children come from underprivileged homes. Their fee will be paid by the California League for the Handicapped, Inc. They come from San Francisco, Richmond, Oakland and Sonora, and for the three not from San Francisco, this is the only chance they get to live with normal children outside their homes. The pilot program is in its second year.

Landing Of Drake To Be Fair Exhibit

The landing of Sir Francis Drake at Nova Albion in June of 1579 will be depicted in Marin County's exhibit at the State Fair in Sacramento Aug. 28 through Sept. 9.

The display will be before a mural of Drake's Bay and the beach where Drake is believed to have careened the Golden Hinde and camped under the curious eyes of the friendly Miwok Indians.

The display will also include a mannequin of Drake, a model of the Golden Hinde and some text telling of the landing. In addition it will include the "plate of brass" or a replica of the plate that Drake left commemorating the landing.

Mrs. Marcelle B. McCoy of Sleepy Hollow, coordinator for the exhibit, said showing the real plate would mean getting a half million dollars in insurance. The plate is kept at the Bancroft Library at University of California, Berkeley.

Mrs. McCoy said she hopes to be able to have Coast Guardsmen stand a guard over the plate. This would reduce the premiums, she said. She said the guarding and the cost of insurance is still being studied.

The exhibit has been designed by Rudolph Theurkoff of Sausalito with much help from his assistant, Stanley Irway, Mrs. McCoy said.

The exhibit will compete with other counties at the fair. Marin County is entering under the historical category, Mrs. McCoy said. She did not know how many other exhibits there will be in the same category.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

It's Nice To Have Sun Tan But Overexposure Can Be Harmful

VAN DELLEN

The virtues of the sun have been extoled for so many generations, we feel a little guilty criticizing the old boy. The heat and light he gives, especially the health producing ultraviolet rays, are desirable but the other side of the ledger is not so pleasing. The sun is capable of burning and overexposure encourages a variety of skin disorders, including cancer.

Many people head for the beach the first warm day to begin the tanning process. It is the same old story in that some will limit the sunbath whereas others will stay until they look like lobsters.

STUDIES HAVE shown that on a clear day at noon in June the average person will become slightly pink after a 20 minute exposure, a vivid red after 50 minutes, and burned at 100 minutes. Blonds and redheads are more sensitive; brunets less so. Vice versa is true when it comes to tanning in that the darker skinned develop a deeper tan. They are able to manufacture more melanin (pigment) which is responsible for the mahogany color.

Sunburn not only is painful and disabling but destroys skin cells and leaves microscopic scars. The epidermis also is damaged by constant exposure to the sun, such as occurs in southerners. It becomes dry, wrinkled, and weatherbeaten. Statistics show that skin cancers are more common in these persons.

IT IS INTERESTING to speculate on why those living in North Africa and Asia Minor cover themselves completely from head to foot. It may be cooler to dress this way but it also is possible they learned centuries ago that too much sun harmed the skin.

The best policy is to take a sensible attitude toward the sun. Those who do not wish to cover up can apply one of many ointments that act as chemical parasols. These include zinc oxide, menthol salicylate, phenol salicylate, p-aminobezoate, the cinnamates, digalloyl trioleate, titanium dioxide, bentonite powder, or benzophenone. They must be applied at frequent intervals because they are likely to wash off when swimming or rolling in the sand.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

BEDWETTING HOUSEHOLD

I. W. writes: When can I expect to see any change in the bedwetting habits of my children, aged 17, 13, and 5? This is a problem that makes me feel I could leave home. I have tried all the mechanical and other suggestions, which gave no help. What is the next step?

REPLY

Consult a psychiatrist and cooperate with him, even though he may suggest that the parents rather than the children need help.

HAND SHAKES

S. J. S. writes: Is there a medicine I can take to prevent my hands from shaking when I eat out?

REPLY

A sedative may help, or perhaps a cocktail, provided trembling is not the result of too much drinking. I assume you know why the hands shake.

Students Tour I-J, KTIM Radio

Four pupils from the International Tutoring Services School got a bonus yesterday at the close of the six-week summer session . . . a tour of the Independent-Journal and Radio Station KTIM.

After their tour all agreed they were impressed, but each added his own particular comment.

"I expected the Independent-Journal would be bigger," said Patty Tawns of 149 Manor Drive, Mill Valley.

Gary Price of 581 Arlington Circle, Novato, thought the tour was worthwhile "because it isn't everybody who gets to see what I saw."

Mark Batten of 29 Mercury Avenue, Belveron Gardens, said "I thought the press was the most interesting thing there. The rolls that they use for the news are most interesting."

Summing up the feeling of the group was Michael Fowler of Building C-30, Marin City, who said, "All of it impressed me."

The pupils were accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. David Capitolo of 204 Adrian Way, San Rafael.

About 20 pupils attended the summer session of the school, headed by director George H. Gregg. Aside from the summer sessions, the school offers private tutoring throughout the year for students from elementary through college classes.

The school, at 538 Fourth Street, San Rafael, will start in "intensive" two-week summer clinic Aug. 19, Gregg reported.

Junior Architect Wins First Prize

Jerry Kazakes, 17, of 1810 Vistazo West in Tiburon has been awarded first prize in the Northern California Junior Architects competition in Oakland for his original design of a single story family residence. The competition was sponsored by the Oakland Spring Home and Garden Show.

Jerry is featured in an article in the August issue of "Seventeen" magazine, in which he discusses his architectural work. He is a senior at Redwood High School.

Adult Swimming Program Slated

Registration will be from 7 to 8 p.m. Classes for beginners and intermediates will be conducted on Mondays and Wednesdays for three weeks. The class hours are 7 to 8 and 8 to 9. The fee is $2 per person for the course.

Property Is Sold For Construction Center

Another step has been taken in the development of a San Rafael construction industry center planned more than two years ago.

L. C. Smith, president of L. C. Smith Building Supplies, Inc., announced today that the firm has purchased approximately 103,000 square feet of land adjoining the property of the Marin Builders Exchange at Belvedere and Alto Streets from H. S. Meinberger and Son and will start construction of a new building within the next three or four months.

The property is the remainder of a 2.7-acre parcel planned to be used as a center for members of the construction industry in early 1961. The 5,000-square foot building of the Marin Builders Exchange completed in July, 1962, was to have been the nucleus of the center.

Smith said he intends to erect a two-story tilt-up building west of the Builders Exchange. The building supplies firm will occupy the lower floor which will be divided into a 10,000-square foot store and a 10,000-square foot warehouse. The warehouse will rise two stories for lumber and plywood storage and the balance of the second floor will be leased out for office space.

Meinberger will construct the building which is expected to be completed within a year.

Smith presently leases two buildings at 427 Irwin Street for building supplies and floor coverings, and another at 55 De Luca Place for plywood storage. He said the new building will enable the firm to consolidate all its facilities under one roof.

Another building is expected to be erected at the northwest corner of the property at approximately the same time and others are planned to follow. Smith said he intends to develop the land according to the original design for its use, with wide areas for parking between the buildings.

Two Teachers Promoted At Three-R School

Two teachers at the San Rafael Three-R School have been promoted to the school's administrative staff, it was announced today by James W. Kirchanski, director.

They are Bruce Burgess of 49 Woodland Avenue, and Thomas Campbell of 111 Antonette Street, both San Rafael.

Burgess has been appointed head counselor, said Kirchanski, and will advise students as to their academic programs. He has been teaching history and literature at the Three-R School during the past year.

Campbell will become vice principal for the upper and lower school where he formerly taught mathematics.

Rafael Meadows Unit Incorporates

Sec. of State Frank Jordan has announced the incorporation of the San Rafael Meadows Improvement Assn.

Director Richard Fleming of 20 Corrillo Drive explained the association plans to hire some teen-agers to clean drainage ditches and do other work in the tract, and the incorporation transfers the liability from the directors to the association.

Fries At Whittier

Gregory Fries, son of Mr. and Mrs. William V. Fries of 1654 Grand Avenue, San Rafael, plans to enroll next month at Whittier College in Whittier. He will begin classes Sept. 16, after orientation activities which start eight days earlier.

Gallinas Sanitary Tax Down

The Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District has the kind of sliding tax rate that taxpayers like — downward.

In June district directors predicted that the 1962-63 rate of 60 cents per $100 valuation would be cut to 32 cents for 1963-64.

Thursday night they lowered the rate further to 25 cents because of a boost in assessed valuation. The district's budget is $100,000.

Directors also announced the resignation of Director R. N. Sundquist, who has moved from the district.

Anyone who wishes to fill the vacancy on the board should send his application to the district office, 300 Smith Road Ranch, San Rafael.

The applicant appointed will fill Sundquist's unexpired term ending in two years.

Applicants must be residents of the district, preferably property owners. "Applicants will be advised of the time and place for personal interview later this month," reported Arthur B. Carpenter, district secretary.

Handicapped Children Are Going Camping

Six handicapped children will be among the more than 50 campers starting a two-week session at Forest Farms camp in Forest Knolls tomorrow.

The campers are of age nine to 13, and the six handicapped children come from underprivileged homes. Their fee will be paid by the California League for the Handicapped, Inc. They come from San Francisco, Richmond, Oakland and Sonora, and for the three not from San Francisco, this is the only chance they get to live with normal children outside their homes. The pilot program is in its second year.

The Wide Open Spaces Of North Marin

If a crow flew from Marinwood to Black Point in his proverbial straight path he would encounter little in the way of development other than the cluster of buildings representing Hamilton Air Force Base. Beyond lie the marshes, tide and farm lands surrounding Novato Creek.

But the motorist, traveling north on Highway 101, takes the route which veers left and passes Loma Verde, Raphael Village and Novato. The scars in the hills to the right of the highway, shown in this photograph, are part of the highway widening project which has progressed beyond what is shown here on July 1.

In the left lower corner, Marinwood comes to a halt against the hills. Heatherstone Drive ends in a dead end while Johnstone Drive is tied off in a neat cul de sac.

Prominent features at Hamilton include the hangars, just off the runway, and the base housing projects distinguished by green lawns and the flat-roofed homes sitting in a regular pattern which branches out in a Y shape from the base.

The Black Point Cut-Off begins beyond the photograph to the left and then cuts across the hills at Black Point and over Petaluma Creek which empties into San Pablo Bay to the right. Beyond lie the rolling farmlands of southern Sonoma County.

Marin Yachtsmen Go To School

Power Squadron Members Learn The Elements Of Good Boating

By DON KEOWN

"The objects of the United States Power Squadrons shall be to establish a high standard of skill in the handling and navigation of yachts, to encourage the study of the science of navigation, to cooperate with the agencies of the United States government charged with the enforcement of the laws and regulations relating to navigation and to stimulate interest in activities which will tend to the upbuilding of our Navy, Coast Guard and Merchant Marine."

A long paragraph—and an ambitious program.

It is taken from the constitution of the United States Power Squadrons. And it explains why the Marin affiliate places such heavy stress upon its educational program.

Along with its activities in the instructional field, the Marin Power Squadron does conduct its recreational programs featuring weekend cruises.

BUT EVEN these serve a serious educational purpose—to permit the members to practice upon the water the theory and techniques they have learned in their classes.

The United States Power Squadrons, an association of yachtsmen and other persons interested in boating, is a nonprofit group incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia and the State of New Jersey.

It has its roots back in 1912

Marin Yachtsmen Go To School

By DON KEOWN

"The objects of the United States Power Squadrons shall be to establish a high standard of skill in the handling and navigation of yachts, to encourage the study of the science of navigation, to cooperate with the agencies of the United States government charged with the enforcement of the laws and regulations relating to navigation and to stimulate interest in activities which will tend to the upbuilding of our Navy, Coast Guard and Merchant Marine."

A long paragraph—and an ambitious program.

It is taken from the constitution of the United States Power Squadrons. And it explains why the Marin affiliate places such heavy stress upon its educational program.

Along with its activities in the instructional field, the Marin Power Squadron does conduct its recreational programs featuring weekend cruises.

BUT EVEN these serve a serious educational purpose—to permit the members to practice upon the water the theory and techniques they have learned in their classes.

The United States Power Squadrons, an association of yachtsmen and other persons interested in boating, is a nonprofit group incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia and the State of New Jersey.

It has its roots back in 1912

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

STEREO HI-FI KITS have become very popular in the past year. Many would-be-kit-builders hesitate to tackle one of these projects because they have no knowledge of electronics. Absolutely no electronic knowledge is required to build one of these modern stereo-kits. Let me explain.

A great amount of engineering design goes into the fabrication of a quality kit. It must be so designed that it does not include unnecessary circuit complications and yet it must have all the elements required for top performance. Secondly, it must be designed so that it can be assembled easily by persons with no knowledge of electronics. Thirdly, it must be designed so that each finished unit will perform like the laboratory model.

How can this be done? Quality kits come with the parts packaged or laid out in groups. Each group comprises one section in the building of the kit. With each section there are detailed pictures showing where each part is to be placed, and where each wire is placed and connected. Also, below the pictures are step by step instructions that tell you exactly what to do. As you complete each step you place a check mark in the space provided.

You can proceed at your own speed and start and stop at any time you please. Just begin after your last check mark.

Will any kit provide you with high quality performance? The answer is no. Many of the mail order house kits are poor investments. They are usually price propositions and quality is secondary. Many reliable service shops will not service mail order kits. Sending defective units back to the mail order house for repairs or replacements is time consuming and costly.

Purchase your kits from a reliable dealer that has a complete service department to take care of your problems, and that can give you proper guidance when you need it. Above all, purchase only quality kits such as Scott, Fisher, Dyna, and Harman-Kardon. Your time is too valuable to waste on a low quality kit.

Progress was slow but steady. One major change was a lifting of the distinction between sail and power boating. The squadrons began to serve all those interested in the handling of small boats of any kind. The "rules of the road" and basic techniques are generally the same for all boats, it was agreed.

IN 1927 the entire instructional program was reviewed and "Advanced Grades" courses installed. The "curriculum" has since been subjected to continuous development to keep in step with changes in boating techniques, needs and interests.

The national membership of the organization now approaches 60,000 men in more than 320 squadrons—one as far away as Okinawa.

The Marin squadron, founded in 1959 with 44 members and with Ed Cadogan and Dr. Al Schwarz as its sparkplugs, has grown to 189 members.

ACTUAL membership is restricted to male yachtsmen and boating enthusiasts 18 or older. However, youths of 16 can become apprentices. And women can hold certificates of qualification in piloting from the squadron although they cannot be official members.

All members must be graduates of the squadron's basic piloting course, which is open without charge to the general public. Before continuing with some of the more advanced classes, the yachtsman must first join the squadron.

Squadron members serve as instructors and proctors without pay. And many of those instructors are also students, continuing their own "schooling" in more advanced seamanship subjects even as they teach the less experienced.

THE MARIN Power Squadron conducts its courses at the College of Marin in Kentfield. And although the program is not a part of the college's official adult education curriculum, the boating classes are scheduled to conform with the college terms.

Eugene Sweeney, squadron commander, points out that "we are quite fortunate in having the college facilities at our disposal. Thus we have blackboards, desks and the other facilities necessary to carry on an educational program."

The squadron also makes use of such training aids of its own as model ships, miniature buoys, celestial globes, compasses, etc.

COURSES offered during the latest term to be completed included the basic piloting class plus navigation, seamanship and instruction techniques. Next month a new series of classes will begin. The piloting class will open Sept. 5, advanced piloting on Sept. 9, junior navigation Sept. 10 and weather Sept. 11.

The courses run for 12 weeks or longer, meeting one night a week.

Squadron members figure that many of them devote from eight to 10 hours a week of their time to the educational program—"easily, once you get involved in it."

Membership meetings of the squadron are held once a month on a Thursday night at the college. Five or six dinner meetings with films, speakers and entertainment are held annually.

HIGHLIGHTS of the year for the yachtsmen, however, are the four or five cruises which the squadron sponsors each year.

Typical was the Saturday voyage through the choppy waters of San Pablo Bay and up the Petaluma River with its tricky channel to Petaluma where the chamber of commerce had arranged for docking space in the heart of the city. Commander Sweeney in his Marilyn led a fleet of 32 boats, all festooned with the U.S. Power Squadron's ensign plus yacht club burgees, officers' flags and colorful bunting.

In Petaluma the skippers and their crews renewed cruising friendships, enjoyed dancing on the dock, and were transported by bus to the Green Mill in Cotati for dinner.

THE PETALUMA Chamber of Commerce recorded the visiting delegation of 140 people as the largest group of its kind ever to visit their city.

After an evening of fun, followed by sleep aboard the boats, the squadron made the return trip the following day.

On all such cruises, the yachtsmen are careful to put into practice the theories of good boating which they have learned in their Power Squadron classes.

THE MEN who make up the Marin squadron represent a wide range of professions. There are doctors, merchants, laborers, teachers, business men, students, and many other occupations represented. Their boats range from eight-foot El Toros up to 60-footers. And something like one-third of the squadron members do not own their own craft.

ney estimates, have sailboats. But many of these, of course, have auxiliary power.

Yachtsmen in their 70s have taken and passed the instruction.

SWEENEY says his squadron is devoting much attention to the eradication of three myths—two about the squadron itself, the other about the sport of boating.

"It is a common belief that the Power Squadron is an arm or auxiliary of the military, or a government agency," he says. "It is not. It is a civilian body in every way. The organization has always enjoyed the friendliest of relationships with the armed forces. But it is not part of those forces."

"It is also still a general belief," he continues, "although less so than it was a few years back, that boating is a sport for millionaires only. It is not just a hobby for the rich. Boating is within the reach of practically everyone today."

NOR, HE ADDS, does the Marin Power Squadron let the opinion that the organization is "just another social club" go unchallenged.

"Many of our members belong to yacht club and engage in their social programs," he says. "But within the squadron, they are committed to a serious program whose primary reason for being is the promotion of good seamanship."

Seamanship he defines as: "The art and skill of handling a boat in a manner that insures the safety of the boat and personnel under all conditions."

This, he admits, covers a lot of territory.

TO PROMOTE good seamanship, the Power Squadron is dedicated to the teaching of the "rules of the road," to familiarizing boaters with nautical terms and their meanings, to instructing in the maneuvering of water craft, to emphasizing the need for safe equipment, to teaching the use of instruments such as mariner's compasses, to explaining the role of such aids to navigation as lighthouses and buoys, to outlining rescue procedures, to the fundamentals of marlinspike seamanship—and to first aid, weather map reading, engine ventilation, safe handling of gasoline, safeguards against fire, rope knots and splices, capacity and stability of small boats, and much else.

"Sometimes," Sweeney says, "it seems like all our evenings are occupied with either teaching of learning about our boats.

"But then, when you read about some boating tragedy that could have been prevented by the exercise of care and sufficient training, you realize that the time is well spent."

The Coat Of Arms Of Fairfax's Colorful 'Lord Charles'

The coat of arms of Lord Charles Snowden Fairfax, 10th baron of Cameron of Scotland and pioneer of the community of Fairfax, is shown reproduced above in simplified form.

It is taken from the cover of the booklet, "The Golden Days of Fairfax" by Mrs. Jean Secchitano of Fairfax, which was off a silk screen by Mrs. Audrey York, also of Fairfax.

The original pattern was found, faded but still legible, by County Librarian Virginia Keating for Mrs. Secchitano in the reference book, Debrett's "Peerage," in the Marin County Library.

The first plan, Mrs. Secchitano says, was to reproduce it in black and white on the inside of the booklet as one of the illustrations.

It was the suggestion of printer Arlen Philpott that it be done, instead, in color for the cover.

Mrs. York's artistic talents were drafted for the "hurry-up" job.

Of Lord Fairfax and the coat of arms, Mrs. Secchitano has this to say in her book:

"Charles Snowden Fairfax was the 10th baron of Cameron of Scotland, the direct descendant of a line of lords who won their fame during the past centuries on England's battlefields.

"Thomas Fairfax, ancestor of our Charles, was one of major instigators in the Cromwellian overthrow of Charles I. He worked successfully as the advocate of the return of Charles II to the monarchy. He was able to take part in this royal turn of events because he had opposed the actual execution of Charles I to his later advantage.

"Like many mottoes on British crests, the name is used to make a punning translation in Latin. Fairfax was punned 'Fare-Fac,' meaning 'Say-Do,' or 'I do what I say I will do.'

"The family pride which Charles Fairfax had in tending and improving his Marin Acres might well serve as an inspiration for the conservation of natural beauty in his village."

Proceeds from the booklet, which sells for 50 cents and is available at Fairfax Paint & Hardware store, go to the library fund of Fairfax's Central School, for which purpose the Fairfax Central Parent-Teachers Assn. sponsored and published the history.

SOUTH-OF-THE-BORDER TREAT

Tacos With A Special Flavor Are McDonough Family Secret

That tempting aroma which annually wafts over the grounds of Sunnyhills on Grape Festival day comes from the Tacos Booth operated by the women of Strawberry Guild No. 2.

There they take advantage of an opportunity to savor a South-of-the-Border treat not generally available to the public.

THE TACOS recipe they enjoy is not only a special one—but also a secret one. It is the property of Mrs. Josephine McDonough of San Francisco and formerly of Marin, and while it is but one of many Mexican delicacies which she can whip up in her kitchen, it is her personal favorite.

The tacos became an integral part of the Grape Festival, itself a Marin tradition, three years ago when Mrs. McDonough's daughter-in-law, Helen, president of the Strawberry Sunnyhills Guild No. 2, was faced with the problem of finding new wares to be sold at the unit's booth at the festival.

Making and selling tacos like those prepared by her mother-in-law occurred to the younger Mrs. McDonough as a natural solution to her problem. Her husband, William, still recalled with relish the Latin dishes his mother had prepared for her family during his boyhood. And Helen McDonough, too, had had ample opportunity to appreciate Josephine McDonough's tacos in more recent years.

THE TACOS were part of a collection of recipes Mrs. Josephine McDonough accumulated during a period of several years when the family resided in Mexico. Later they moved to Pasadena where she and her husband, the late W. D. (Mac) McDonough, opened a milk store.

It was not long before prospective customers were more interested in the aromas drifting from that back room than they were in purchasing milk. The result was that the milk store was converted into a delicatessen specializing in the take-out orders of Mexican foods prepared from Mrs. McDonough's recipes.

Nor did the enthusiasm pall when on the first Saturday in October of that year—traditional date for the Grape Festival—three cooks armed with six skillets and backed up by 12 other guild members, operating as an assembly line, turned out and served more than 2,000 tacos to the throng on the Sunnyhills grounds.

There were problems to be sure including the restless youngsters, waiting in long lines of anxious customers, who entertained themselves by aiming their squirt guns at the hot skillets "just to see what would happen."

IT WAS apparent to the women, however, that a better production method would be needed to meet future demand which was certain to increase after the success of that initial venture.

Bill McDonough, husband of the guild president, was pressed into service. He developed an ingenious device of molded sheet metal which holds the tacos in place while they are immersed several at a time into a deep-fat fryer.

NOW THE tacos are turned out at a rate of more than 400 per hour, or some 3,000 during the seven-hour Grape Festival day.

Sixty-four pounds of beans are baked, 80 pounds of onions chopped and 90 heads of lettuce shredded in advance for the assembly line operation each year.

The 75 pounds of meat and sauce are prepared each year by Helen McDonough only. And since it is here, in the seasoning and the method of combining the ingredients, that the secret to the unusual flavor of the tacos lies, the real key to the recipe remains safely within the McDonough family.

She will be on hand at the Sunnyhills grounds again this year on Oct. 5 when the 1963 fund-raising event is to be held. And when, once again, the spicy, distinctive aroma of tacos, de la McDonough, will drift over the Sunnyhills grounds.

HOWEVER, AS a most tasty "consolation prize" from her collection of Mexican recipes, she shares with Marin Magazine readers her method for preparing another of her favorites—beef sopa served as a casserole:

One dozen corn tortillas are quartered and fried "softly" in corn oil. Cooked together in a skillet are a pound and a half of lean ground beef (one stewed chicken can be substituted), one onion, one teaspoon of salt and one four-ounce can of peeled green chilies. A can of mushroom soup is blended with one pint of sour cream. And a pound of longhorn cheese is grated.

What you have then may not be tacos. But it is, Helen McDonough assures you, one of the most tempting dishes in her mother-in-law's priceless treasury of Mexican recipes.

IN HER KITCHEN preparing tacos is Mrs. William H. (Helen) McDonough. She is following a recipe from the collection of Mexican delicacies which her mother-in-law, Mrs. Josephine McDonough, accumulated while living in Mexico. Thousands of Marinites have become acquainted with the tempting tacos at the booth operated annually by Strawberry Sunnyhills Guild No. 2 at the Grape Festival. But the contents of the recipe—especially the distinctive seasonings—remain a secret with the McDonoughs. (Independent-Journal photo)

NINE-YEAR-OLD Scott McDonough enjoys some of the tacos prepared by his mother. And he pronounces them "good as always." Scott is one of six children of the William H. McDonoughs. And they all regard as special treats the South-of-the-Border recipes which their grandmother, Mrs. Josephine McDonough, has handed down to their mother, Mrs. Helen McDonough. Gambling In Marin—And It's Legal

'Blind Baggage' Stirs Lively Bidding At Storage Auctions

(Editor's Note: Harry Craft, business and restaurant columnist for the Independent-Journal, sometimes wears a second hat—that of an auctioneer. He conducts the sale of unredeemed storage goods for a number of Marin moving and storage companies. Here he discusses those events, which hold a fascination for many Marinites.)

By HARRY CRAFT

There is a lively form of gambling that goes on occasionally in Marin—not in a backroom, nor behind closed doors.

It has its own set of rules—and the sky is the limit. You might get caught if you try to bluff, but if you fail to raise when the game gets rough, you can still pull out of it without losing your "ante."

Sometimes the stakes run high, but you can never be quite sure what's in the pot. It's unlikely that you'll lose your shirt, but also possible you'll wind up with one belonging to someone else.

One thing about it: It's as legal as draw poker, Black Jack or roulette in Las Vegas. If there are any cops around, they usually stand by and enjoy the play.

IN SOME OF these games I am the dealer—the croupier, if you like. Technically I am called the auctioneer, because these are auctions of unredeemed storage goods. Every year, one or more of the local moving and storage companies have them.

So far this year I have conducted four.

The goods up for sale can be classified in two ways: What is plain to be seen, and the unknown. It is the latter that arouses the most interest every time—the cartons, boxes, barrels, trunks, footlockers and suitcases with contents undetermined.

Say what you like, there's a reckless urge in all of us to take a chance on a "pig in a poke," on discovering a hidden bit of treasure. Some people have it more than others.

IT IS MY job to pit these gamblers one against the other until the highest possible bid is wrung from the competition. It may come reluctantly from tense lips or as a careless, almost imperceptible nod of the head.

Actually it's not as difficult as it may sound, for the bidders do most of the work. All I have to do is nudge them along.

To the newcomer it must seem that fantastic prices are paid for blind baggage. It is true that some of the bidders often let the visible merchandise — furniture, appliances, TV sets, pianos, etc.—go begging.

AUCTIONS ARE generally held whenever an accumulation of goods results from unpaid storage bills. Some lots may be carried on the books for months or years when suddenly the depositor disappears from sight. Or he may simply be financially unable to redeem his goods. The storage lot then ceases to be profitable and occupies space that could be used to better advantage.

The warehouseman's legal recourse is to auction off the goods for whatever can be recovered. After notifying the depositor by registered mail at his last known address and advising him of the pending action, a notice is published in the newspaper announcing a date of sale.

If more money is received for the depositor's goods than is owing, including expenses of sale, the balance must be refunded to him. But this seldom happens, as such storage lots invariably have more charged against them than can be realized.

OVER 10 OR 12 years of conducting storage auctions in Marin I've come to know many of the perennials who attend them—but there are always newcomers for whom it's a first experience. Consequently one audience may be different from another. Like a stage performer you have to judge its response during the first few rounds.

There is a reluctance to be the one to make the first bid. Raises are likely to be slow and the first article may go for a real bargain. The auction picks up in tempo as the crowd gets the feel of it.

Often during the sale I am tempted to make a bid of my own, and occasionally I do if the article is something in which I am interested.

That set of matched golf irons I'm using cost me only $5—and no one would top it.

BUT IT'S NOT a good policy to make a practice of it, nor for the storage company to exercise its right to do so. On sealed containers particularly, it arouses a feeling among bidders that someone has examined the contents and has the advantage of knowing what they are. No one likes to play with a stacked deck.

The question is often asked if I have this knowledge—or if the storage company does.

Speaking for myself, the answer is definitely in the negative. I can only guess, like anyone else.

AS FAR AS the storage company is concerned, if it originally packed the goods, the packer who did the job might have a general recollection of the contents. But it is unlikely he would remember the individual containers and what they had in them after performing many similar jobs during the course of his work.

In Marin County it is not the general practice to go through them before the sale, except large crates from which mirrors, glass and table tops are extracted to be matched with corresponding articles of furniture. What may take place in other areas I am unable to say.

IN MY opinion — better than 50 per cent. This is based on post-auction discussions with successful bidders from whom satisfied responses generally outnumber disappointments.

A single carton may contain no more than unwashed laundry or odds and ends packed in last minute moving haste. But unless it is a large one, I usually group two or more under one bid.

Many of the old-timers feel their chances are still better by bidding up on as many as they can, on the gamble that at least one of them holds a "jackpot."

WATCH THEM at their work. They ask to have the cartons hefted to determine the weight. If there is a revealing opening, you can be sure they'll probe it for a clue.

Markings are taken into consideration, particularly lot numbers. If a bidder has already secured containers from one lot, he looks for more of the same to protect himself against split packing of dishes, etc.

BOOKS ARE usually easily identified by their weight and packing in small cartons. Some bidders watch for them —not only in the hope of getting a rare edition, but because people sometimes use peculiar things for bookmarks. It's not uncommon to

You'd be surprised how carelessly diamond rings, watches, other articles of jewelry, foreign coins and currency are stowed away among trinklets. If you've ever moved, think back. Can you remember just where you packed that stamp album, bottle of gold dust, assortment of souvenir coins?

MOST COMMON values uncovered are in silverware, good china, glassware, small objects of art and kitchenware. The latter sometimes includes electric mixers, frypans and roasters—often unused.

Frequently an undercurrent of excitement pervades the bidding when the packaged goods appear especially inviting. It starts with a general round of brisk one-dollar raises and jump bids, and gradually narrows down to two or three serious contenders — with the rest tensely standing by to watch the battle.

At times I have seen people so carried away that they topped their own high bids before another voice was raised — and husbands and wives, separated in the crowd, outbid each other.

ALL THIS ADDS a light, humorous touch seldom found in the usual run of auctions with their rapid, staccato "sold American" patter. An occasional laugh inspires many a bid that might not otherwise be forthcoming.

And I'm there to get the highest price you are willing to pay for your fun. I promise I won't ask you to split the pot if you make a killing.

A MARIN PROFILE

Britton Rey Guides Growing Belvedere

By CORENA GREEN

Like nip and tuck, salt and pepper, or hither and yon, the names of Britton and Rey just naturally seem to belong together.

When connected by the "&" they represent an esteemed firm of lithographers established in 1852, which recorded in picture the San Francisco of pioneer days as well as many of the early mining camps. Because of this firm and because its prints are still in existence, we know what the Bay Area looked like in bygone days.

Joined together as one name they become the present city manager of Belvedere, a long time resident of the island, grandson of Rey, grand nephew of Britton for whom he was named.

FAMILIARLY known as "Bing," Britton Rey serves in the dual capacity of city manager and city clerk and his wife is city treasurer.

Four times elected city clerk, he has been unopposed although in the last election there were six write-ins for another Belvedere resident, actor Sterling Hayden.

Rey manages the administrative problems of Belvedere which, as anyone who regularly attends the meetings of the Belvedere City Council knows, are many and varied. Drainage, sewage, zoning and water supply matters regularly appear on the agenda involving different persons and different properties.

PERHAPS the problem is a malfunctioning pump in the sewer system, or underground pipes closed with roots. It may be a flood of water through a piece of property where an unwise contractor cut back too far, or it may be not enough domestic water high on the island.

It may be a massive oak tree tumbling into one of Belvedere's narrow streets which were laid out when persons rode in horse-drawn buggies. It may be budgetary problems—trying to make the tax dollar stretch to please residents who already feel they carry too much of a burden.

REY HAS not always been in city government. The United States Naval Reserve, from which he is retired as a commander, occupied him during two World Wars. In between he was in the lubricating oil business in San Francisco and president of a crop-dusting corporation from 1928 to 1940.

He describes crop-dusting as a dangerous but exciting occupation. His company was a pioneer in the field, operating mostly in California's central valleys but also as far away as Illinois.

Rey is proud of his family's contributions to the armed services. During World War I his wife Audrey (Radcliffe) was selected as one of a group of 50 young women in Washington, D.C., who were sent to France by the army to relieve men who were doing clerical work.

THIS experiment was considered very successful and there was much discussion during the years following of organizing a Women's Army Corps. But it was not until 1942 that the Women's Auxiliary Corps was formed. This, in 1943, became the Women's Army Corps (WAC).

Rey himself saw sea duty in World War I as an ensign on a sub-chaser.

When World War II started he returned to the Navy as a senior grade lieutenant and was assigned as executive officer at a new base in Eureka.

In July, 1942, he was sent to the South Pacific with Cub 1, the first advanced base unit in the New Hebrides. Then he joined the amphibious force and was commanding officer of boat pool 8 in Rendova, New Georgia, and the Solomon Islands.

EIGHTEEN months later he returned to the states as a lieutenant commander and was assigned as the Navy member of a joint Army-Navy board at Fort Pierce., Fla.

Early in 1946 he returned to the Pacific Coast where he served on the general court martial board at Yerba Buena Island. In August he retired as commander after 23 years of service to his country.

From the Navy he turned to contracting and built several homes in Belvedere. His appointment as city clerk came in 1947.

REY SAYS his philosophy of government is to try to get the most done with the least amount of money. He calls himself a jack-of-all-trades, and adds that this is necessary in a small city with a small crew. He supervises the four-man police force, four-man public works department and one-woman office force, and is responsible for hiring and firing city employees.

The fire department of Belvedere is 100 per cent volunteer, administered by a fire chief who is appointed by the city council.

REY IS very close to Belvedere which he has seen grow and change over the past half century. Although born in San Francisco at an aunt's home, his family home was at 428 Golden Gate Avenue where his parents, Valentine J. A. Rey and Helen Lavery Rey, lived.

His lithographer forebears, Britton and Rey, were original stockholders in the Belvedere Land Co. They were interested in the development of the island and came in the summer to rent the China Cabin.

He attended the Belvedere School and commuted on the ferryboat to Lowell High School in San Francisco, going on to the University of California following his graduation.

IT WAS in Dr. David Starr Jordan's home at Stanford University that he became officially engaged to his wife-to-be.

His twin sons still live in Belvedere. Jim is now married and lives on Acacia Avenue and Bob is at home.

"Belvedere," Rey says "experienced its most rapid growth from 1890 to 1910, and then settled down to remain in the horse-and-buggy era. I can remember horses and cows and even a dairy "on the island."

HE ADDS that in 1940 there were still only about 500 residents.

"Then the ownership of the land company changed to one interested developer. By 1950 the population had increased to 800 and, with the building of the lagoon, the population jumped to over 2,100 persons."

Rey says he sees no special problems in the future for Belvedere except for the tax spiral which, if it continues, will permit only the wealthiest of people to live in Belvedere.

"And, unfortunately, that doesn't include me," he adds wryly.

"WHY DID MY SILK DRESS DEVELOP LIGHT STREAKS?"

The whitish streaks in your silk dress are caused by the crocking of the dye. This loss of color occurs where the dye has poor resistance to rubbing. Even the friction of wear may cause it. Some dyes resist crocking until immersed in solvent or water. Crocking in underarm or neck areas may be caused by the moisture from perspiration combined with the abrasion from wear.

Crocking, which can happen to cottons as well as silks, is a dyeing problem. Dyes of certain colors are more susceptible to crocking than others. However, in your dress, poor penetration of the dye into the silk was the cause. The dyeing was of a surface nature. This can happen when the gumming agent present on silk yarns has not been removed adequately. The dye only partially penetrates the yarn. Thus, abrasion or wear, plus moisture from perspiration cause the fabric which is chiefly surface-dyed, to show color loss. This will not occur in well-dyed yarns.

Consult with your professional cleaner. In darker silks and cottons, he can sometimes improve the condition of badly crocked fabrics.

At the Art Cirimele home at 298 Arias, Terra Linda, the family car sits outside while the garage is occupied by what appears at first to be a steel refugee from an automobile wrecking yard.

But he will hasten to add that on the racing oval "she gets the job done. She will get out there and move, and keep going."

PRETTY DOROTHY Cirimele is resigned to the situation which sees the family automobile playing second fiddle to the racing car, and to her husband's devotion of long hours to his favorite sport.

Actually, Art Cirimele is only half-owner of the Hornet. Co-owner of the modified stock car or hardtop is his brother, Ray Cirimele of San Francisco. But Art now does all the driving for the brother team, Ray having been twice injured in track crack-ups in a period of two years.

THEY FIGURE that the four of them put in from 50 to 60 hours a week preparing and racing the Hornet. Most of that racing takes place on the Vallejo Speedway quarter-mile oval where No. 36 is a regular starter and, almost as regularly, a winner of the semi-main event.

CHECKING THE ENGINE of the Hudson Special No. 36, the Hornet, is the car's driver and co-owner, Art Cirimele. He has just completed a "dry run" in the driveway of his Terra Linda home. Note the front crash or "nerve" bars, the front wheels which have been bent in opposite directions for the contours of the Vallejo Speedway quarter-mile oval where the hardtop races, and how the tires have been grooved to provide better traction on the track. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

MECHANIC SPEED DILLON of the Hornet's pit crew straps owner-driver Art Cirimele into the cockpit of the racing car. Although he has been racing for 15 years, Cirimele has never had a serious mishap. Once his car rolled over, but the roll bars which can be seen in this photo saved him from injury.

MAKING A FINAL CHECK of his brother's safety gear—crash helmet, shoulder harness, seat belt, etc.—is Ray Cirimele, older of the two brothers and part owner of the car. It is the standard procedure for Ray to make certain his brother is properly "bolted" into his seat before he takes off for a racing event or a practice run.

Marin Men Build Themselves A Speedway Winner

What makes the showing noteworthy is the fact that No. 36 is a 1946 model Hudson two-door sedan, a make not often seen on the racing ovals. Powered by a six-cylinder engine (and usually running against eight-cylinder cars) and with a Hudson transmission and rear-end, it is always raced in second gear. Art Cirimele never shifts into high gear because of the short straightaway of the quarter-mile oval.

IT IS THE only car at Vallejo that "runs A-frames" and not straight axles and it is also the sole Hudson.

The modified stock car's other racing refinements include roll bars that completely inclose the driver, crash bars in front to protect the radiator, an aircraft - type bucket seat, shoulder harness plus aviation seat belt for the driver, a suspension system that has been completely "rewedged" to throw virtually the entire weight upon the right side of the car with only minimum weight on the left rear and none at all on the left front, and traction masters as part of that suspension system to stabilize the rear-end of the car on its fast take-offs.

The car's interior has been gutted and all upholstery and, of course, glass are gone.

"THE ENGINE," according to mechanic Dillon, "has been balanced down to the last lock-washer."

And the wheels have been bent especially for the Vallejo track, the right front wheel tilting outwards at a crazy angle, the left front wheel bent in the opposite direction but to a lesser degree.

Art Cirimele admits that when he first acquired the car for racing and began the modification and tune-up program at his home, one neighbor attempted to work up a protest petition in the neighborhood.

BUT NOW the Hornet reposes inside the garage except when actually undergoing mechanical improvements and repairs or enroute to and from the Vallejo track. And Cirimele and his aides are careful to schedule and conduct their work sessions—most of them on Saturday afternoons—so that they do not constitute a noise nuisance in the neighborhood.

"Many of the neighbors seem to be interested in the car, and the rest of them are tolerant," he says. "As for the kids, they're fascinated."

It had about 40,000 miles on the speedometer. "And," says Art, "it looked like it had just come out of the factory."

THE COST: $15.

Since then about $1,000 has been invested in the car making it into a winner at Vallejo. Part of those costs have come from the racing car's two sponsors, John Gugel's Union Service Station in San Rafael and Phil and Jim's Auto Wreckers in San Francisco.

The Cirimeles finance their own share of the expenses from their track winnings. Art is an electrician, Ray a mechanic. And neither takes money from his paycheck to help defray the cost of their racing hobby.

"We have to win to keep racing," Art says.

BOTH MEN have family responsibilities that prevent them from spending heavily upon the sport, no matter how fond they are of it. Both are the fathers of three children.

They began their racing about 15 years ago when their father financed their first car for them.

Their initial racing experience came on the old Oakland five-eighths mile track where they raced Fords and Plymouths. Then they moved to early model stock cars and to drag racing.

After racing the early model stock cars in Sacramento and at Contra Costa, the Cirimeles had their first experience with Hudsons. Driving a 1951 four-door sedan, they consistently beat the larger Oldsmobiles, Cadillacs and Buicks. But in 1952 the convertible class was the most challenging field and the Cirimeles could not find a Hudson convertible. So they bought a two-door Hudson sedan and made it into a convertible. They continued to win frequently.

"BECAUSE," explains Art, "we had heard that the Hudson was superb for suspension, and that it had an engine which would really take a beating. We decided to experiment with it, and I guess you could say we kind of pioneered in racing a Hudson on a quarter-mile oval dirt track."

Through the 1950s the Cirimeles continued to drive their Hudsons with success. Then in 1960, on the old Oakland five-eighths-mile track, Ray had his first serious mishap. He piled up and was thrown from his car onto the track. As he lay there, the other cars whizzed past, narrowly missing him.

The elder of the Cirimele brothers spent a month in the hospital recovering. So popular was he with his fellow drivers that a group of them got together, built him a new car to replace the wrecked one and parked it ouside his hospital window for him to see.

AFTER HIS recovery, Ray Cirimele returned to driving. But about a year ago, while driving a midget racer in Oakland, he crashed into a concrete wall at 120 miles an hour.

Since then Art has been the sole driver in the Cirimele family.

Mechanics Dillon and Lombardi are as enthusiastic about the sport as the Cirimeles. Along with his pit crew experience, Dillon has also driven small stock cars and H-production sports cars. At present he has a G-stock Oldsmobile with four-speed transmission which he sometimes races on Sundays at Vacaville. Art Cirimele is currently teaching him to drive a midget racing car which he owns.

LOMBARDI, described by his fellow members of the Hornet crew as "one of the best machinists in the county," works for San Rafael Auto Parts. His interest is confined to the mechanical end of racing—not driving.

Dillon voices a dream of the entire quartet when he says they would like to go, as a group, to Indianapolis as the pit crew for an entry in the 500-mile Memorial Day Classic.

"We think we have a winning combination that could really help some one," he says.

THEN HE smiles: "Of course, if some one could come up with $30,000, we could go to Indianapolis with a car of our own. Boy, wouldn't that be something!"

In the meantime, the two co-owners and the two mechanics are fully preoccupied with the $15 Hornet.

Their aim: To move up from their present status as regular winners of the semi-main event at Vallejo to the faster company of the main event.

"So far," says Dillon, "the bigger engines of some of the cars have been just a little too much for us. But we recently spent 100 hours readjusting the suspension system and getting ready to bid for a win in the main event."

DILLON POINTS out that the six-cylinder Hudson is frequently called upon to run against eight - cylinder hardtops that are 800 pounds lighter. "The fact that we pretty well hold our own shows that we have put together quite a car, I think," he says with pride.

Why then do they enter what is largely an eight-cylinder field with a six-cylinder car? "Because it is more of a challenge that way," the mechanic answers. "When we win, we win on our own mechanical ability plus Art's driving skill."

The team figures that by the close of the current racing season (it runs March to October) the Hornet will be "burnt out" and they will have to find themselves another hardtop. They are, therefore, in the market for another Hudson — vintage 1940 to 1948. They are also hopeful of locating another sponsor to see them through the 1964 season.

THEY ARE hoping they will come up with a "new" car capable of even greater speeds than their current Hudson Special — which is considerable.

The Cirimeles say that the Hornet hits a top speed of about 90 miles an hour on the short straightaway or chute at Vallejo. The sharp turns are negotiated at about 35 miles an hour by sliding the car around them.

The reason the Hornet is virtually a one-track car, the brothers explain, is because of that special wedging of the wheels, fixed for the Vallejo Speedway's contours and conditions.

The Saturday night racing cards at Vallejo—competition starts at 7:15 p.m.—attract from 2,000 to 4,000 fans each weekend.

WITH MANY of those fans, the "underdog" six-cylinder Hornet has become something of a personal rooting favorite.

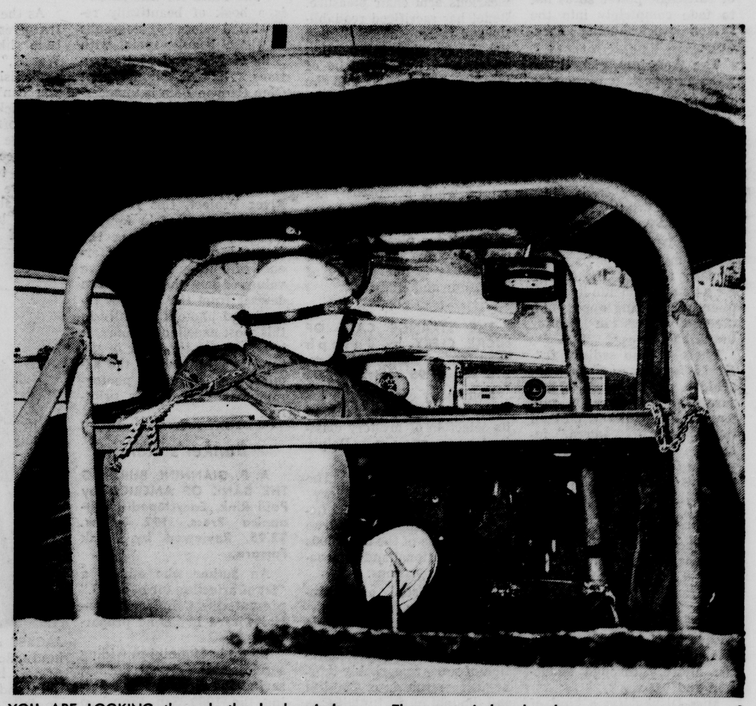
"Our $15 car with its $1,000 worth of improvements and modifications frequently beats hardtops upon which as much as $4,000 has been spent," Art Cirimele says. "When you do that, you really get a feeling of accomplishment."



YOU ARE LOOKING through the back window into the car and at Art Cirimele as he checks his instruments including timing clock and tacometer. The rear window has been cut away as part of the modification of the stock car to fit it for speedway competition.

CHECKING THE ENGINE of the Hudson Special No. 36, the Hornet, is the car's driver and co-owner, Art Cirimele. He has just completed a "dry run" in the driveway of his Terra Linda home. Note the front crash or "nerve" bars, the front wheels which have been bent in opposite directions for the contours of the Vallejo Speedway quarter-mile oval where the hardtop races, and how the tires have been grooved to provide better traction on the track. MECHANIC SPEED DILLON of the Hornet's pit crew straps owner-driver Art Cirimele into the cockpit of the racing car. Although he has been racing for 15 years, Cirimele has never had a serious mishap. Once his car rolled over, but the roll bars which can be seen in this photo saved him from injury.

MAKING A FINAL CHECK of his brother's safety gear—crash helmet, shoulder harness, seat belt, etc.—is Ray Cirimele, older of the two brothers and part owner of the car. It is the standard procedure for Ray to make certain his brother is properly "bolted" into his seat before he takes off for a racing event or a practice run.

tioned Saturday night cards at Vallejo.

What makes the showing noteworthy is the fact that No. 36 is a 1946 model Hudson two-door sedan, a make not often seen on the racing ovals. Powered by a six-cylinder engine (and usually running against eight-cylinder cars) and with a Hudson transmission and rear-end, it is always raced in second gear. Art Cirimele never shifts into high gear because of the short straightaway of the quarter-mile oval.

IT IS THE only car at Vallejo that "runs A-frames" and not straight axles and it is also the sole Hudson.

The modified stock car's other racing refinements include roll bars that completely inclose the driver, crash bars in front to protect the radiator, an aircraft - type bucket seat, shoulder harness plus aviation seat belt for the driver, a suspension system that has been completely "rewedged" to throw virtually the entire weight upon the right side of the car with only minimum weight on the left rear and none at all on the left front, and traction masters as part of that suspension system to stabilize the rear-end of the car on its fast take-offs.

The car's interior has been gutted and all upholstery and, of course, glass are gone.

"THE ENGINE," according to mechanic Dillon, "has been balanced down to the last lock-washer."

And the wheels have been bent especially for the Vallejo track, the right front wheel tilting outwards at a crazy angle, the left front wheel bent in the opposite direction but to a lesser degree.

The bent wheels, the bars and the scars from the racing wars all combine to give the Hornet something less than a sleek appearance.

Art Cirimele admits that when he first acquired the car for racing and began the modification and tune-up program at his home, one neighbor attempted to work up a protest petition in the neighborhood.

BUT NOW the Hornet reposes inside the garage except when actually undergoing mechanical improvements and repairs or enroute to and from the Vallejo track. And Cirimele and his aides are careful to schedule and conduct their work sessions—most of them on Saturday afternoons—so that they do not constitute a noise nuisance in the neighborhood.

"Many of the neighbors seem to be interested in the car, and the rest of them are tolerant," he says. "As for the kids, they're fascinated."

It had about 40,000 miles on the speedometer. "And," says Art, "it looked like it had just come out of the factory."

THE COST: $15.

Michener Gives His New Novel Exotic Setting That Fascinates

By DON KEOWN

James A. Michener's new novel, 'Caravans," is by no means as pretentious or awesome a literary project as its predecessor, "Hawaii."

It is, nevertheless, a praiseworthy performance.

This Book-of-the-Month Club selection for August is an unusual and exciting adventure yarn in which Michener once again demonstrates his fine flare for an exotic setting. This time he has chosen Afghanistan of 1946—"one of the world's great cauldrons," his central character calls it.

There is no such sweeping scope of history as was covered in "Hawaii." "Caravans" is pinpointed to that one year immediately after World War II, and to the Afghan and world situations of that year.

A young Jewish attache with the U.S. Embassy in Kabul draws the assignment of locating an American girl who has married an Afghan engineer, gone with him into the desert and then disappeared.

The hunt and adventures which follow take Mark Miller through the wildest and most remote sections of a fabulous country steeped in old cultures and old superstitions and suspicions. The land and people still largely in the grip of antiquity are described magnificently by Michener. The reader is spellbound by this probing look at a strange and savage country which in 1946 was still quite unlike any other state on earth.

The plot is fast-moving and of sufficient power so as not to fade completely into the rather overwhelming backdrop.

The American girl, Ellen, poses an especially perplexing problem for Michener. It is not too difficult to accept a young American woman of well-to-do background who has married an educated Afghan and has gone to his country with its very different customs. It is much more difficult to believe that this young product of Bryn Mawr would then leave her husband to join a band of illiterate and unwashed Gypsy-like nomads.

What is the key to her character? Is she idealist, cynic, adventuress, opportunist, naive, scheming, wise, foolish, mixed-up, dedicated? Michener tries to provide an answer in his closing chapters, but, like us, you may not be totally satisfied.

Nevertheless, here is adventure the way Americans like it — a colorful background, much romance, considerable mystery, a touch of international intrigue, virile action, all woven together by a master writer. The background may tend at times to overshadow the other elements, but that won't greatly hinder your reading pleasure.

You can bet that "Caravans" is going to wind up as a movie. And if it is well done, it should be quite a spectacle.

MICHENER'S next project: A book on Israel. He is currently in that country working on it.

JAMES BENET of the San Francisco Chronicle has written in "A Guide to San Francisco and the Bay Region" a book which is just what its title implies.

Here is no "travelog" in print intended for a reader's vicarious arm chair pleasure. Benet has sacrificed readability and instead has crammed the book with information which he believes will be of interest and assistance to the visitor to San Francisco and the Bay Area.

This guide is distinctive in another respect—it must be one of the very few without a Herb Caen introduction.

It will, we feel, be of genuine help to the tourist, or to the newcomer still getting acquainted with the Bay Region. It is very comprehensive, quite accurate and a little dull. It is meant to inform, not entertain.

Beauty Spots

THE PLACE NO ONE KNEW by Eliot Porter, Sierra Club, 167 pages, $25. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"The Place No One Knew" was a stretch of the Colorado River, extending from above Hite, Utah, to below the Crossing of the Fathers—a historic stretch, but truly viewed by but a handful.

With it will vanish some spots of beauty so breathtaking as to seem almost unreal.

"The Place No One Knew" is a book of beautifully reproduced colored photographs of those beauty spots, with little text beyond poetic captions. The text contends that Glen Canyon Dam is unnecessary and is needlessly destroying a great wonderland of nature.

Having grown up in a fertile but arid land which may be reclaimed by the Colorado River Project, this reviewer sees the equation in far different light than does the Sierra Club. But no difference of opinion as to relative values of dam and canyon can detract from the beauties reproduced photographically in this most excellent volume. It is a book for the lover of natural beauty, and for the admirer of beautiful photography and superlative printing.

Banker's Role

A. P. GIANNINI: BUILDING THE BANK OF AMERICA by Paul Rink, Encyclopedia Britannica Press, 192 pages, $2.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

There is Giannini providing services for the poor farmer, saving the financial day during the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, standing strong through the depression and putting the monetary foundation under the Golden Gate Bridge.

While noting charges of monopoly, government hearings and sharp practices, the author sees it all from the Giannini bench.

This book, one in the Britannica Bookshelf-Great Lives series for teen-age readers, does impart a sense of adventure to banking and a clear indication of banking's role in the affairs of the day.

As the Boston Pops Orchestra gives new life to an old tune like "Pop Goes the Weasel," so does David Ely embellish the old saying . . . you can't teach an old dog new tricks.

He offers a disheartening message for those who dream of a second chance in life—a chance to become something they are not.

In a short work that might best be described as a sort of philosophical "Twilight Zone," he tells of one man's journey into a never-never land for adults.

A stodgy, middle-aged banker is transformed into a successful West Coast artist, at least on the surface. It is the method of transformation and the sub-surface effects that lift Ely's tale out of the ordinary.

The author plunges quickly into the well-constructed plot and carries the reader with him on an almost continual note of suspense. There are several chilling passages as Ely describes the work of the organization that specializes in "re-birth" and the plight of its unsuccessful clients.

In all, Ely has fashioned a novel that is highly readable, yet thought-provoking . . . a neat trick.

Sleuths & Suspense

Doris Disney, one of our busiest mystery writers, is especially adept at the more genteel who-dun-its, frequently involving upper middleclass homes in smaller towns and cities.

There are no sadistic fist-fights, few brutal policemen, seldom a breakneck chase, rarely an exchange of gunfire, and the killings often take place "off camera." Instead, she offers some real puzzles for the mystery fan to sink his teeth into, and some better-than-average characterizations.

In "Here Lies" the murder has taken place a good many years before our story begins. A skull is uncovered in the graveyard of a Connecticut town. And young Griff Hughes, not the kind of private detective you are used to, goes about unraveling the mystery through deduction and leg work.

Miss Disney has a kind of understated style of narration. And this time her characters, while acceptable, are presented in somewhat less depth than in past books. Still, it makes for pleasant, if not real exciting, reading. And the puzzle is one worthy of your time and study.

Joseph Shearing's "The Strange Case of Lucile Clery" is of 1932 vintage and is a fictionalized account of a true French crime of the mid-1800s that had national and international repercussions.

Shearing's study of the ambitious and embittered governess is a brilliant example of characterization in depth. The book is also a demonstration of some remarkably thorough research into the life and thought of the tumultuous times just before the French Revolution of 1848.

POEMS OF A DIFFERENT STRIPE by Lynn C. Hickman, Snowboard Mountain, 63 pages, paperback, 50 cents. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Lynn Hickman writes poetry of the old-fashioned kind—lines that rhyme in the rhythmic pattern that we used to recite in sing-song fashion.

If your taste in poems is in this direction, you will no doubt enjoy this little booklet. These are simple poems about simple subjects. And while Miss Hickman varies her style occasionally, there is nothing that is really too deep or too complex.

Corps For Peace

THE PEACE CORPS by Glenn D. Kittler, pictures by Peace Corps, Paperback Library, 127 pages, 50 cents. Reviewed by Corena Green.

This small paperback describes the activities of the Peace Corps. It also lists the requirements for acceptance into the corps, procedures for applying, services offered and the types of persons needed.

The book is full of pictures of the peace corpsmen in action all over the world. The tales of their problems, ingenuity and rewarding experiences read like a biography of Dr. Tom Dooley.

Sleuths & Suspense

Doris Disney, one of our busiest mystery writers, is especially adept at the more genteel who-dun-its, frequently involving upper middleclass homes in smaller towns and cities.

There are no sadistic fist-fights, few brutal policemen, seldom a breakneck chase, rarely an exchange of gunfire, and the killings often take place "off camera." Instead, she offers some real puzzles for the mystery fan to sink his teeth into, and some better-than-average characterizations.

In "Here Lies" the murder has taken place a good many years before our story begins. A skull is uncovered in the graveyard of a Connecticut town. And young Griff Hughes, not the kind of private detective you are used to, goes about unraveling the mystery through deduction and leg work.

Miss Disney has a kind of understated style of narration. And this time her characters, while acceptable, are presented in somewhat less depth than in past books. Still, it makes for pleasant, if not real exciting, reading. And the puzzle is one worthy of your time and study.

Doubleday continues to exercise faultless judgment in its selection of mystery classics for reprinting in its Dolphin series.

Joseph Shearing's "The Strange Case of Lucile Clery" is of 1932 vintage and is a fictionalized account of a true French crime of the mid-1800s that had national and international repercussions.

Shearing's study of the ambitious and embittered governess is a brilliant example of characterization in depth. The book is also a demonstration of some remarkably thorough research into the life and thought of the tumultuous times just before the French Revolution of 1848.

JACKET design for "Expertland," Robert Sommer's witty new book about consultants and specialists—"wind-up dolls"—who have become the high priests of our culture, is by Larry Lurin.

THE FINK FAMILY from Seattle, Wash., will be presented in a handbell concert at the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo Wednesday at 8 p.m. Left to right are Kathy, Lawrence Jr., Mary Lu, Mrs. Fink and Lawrence Fink. Their appearance is being sponsored by Wilbur F. Russell's Marin Handbell Ringers, who will conduct a seminar on handbell ringing that same day at the church starting at 1 p.m. There will be no admission charge for either the concert or seminar.

Deeply

Chains from my heart
Across the chasm to her will.

I beg her to wish, desire;

She wishes—

Emptiness.

Is love hell?
Or is it the caricature,
Thereof.

So close,

THE COMPLETE PIANO MUSIC OF BRAHMS—Walter Klien, pianist. Volume I, VOX VBX 430. Volume II, Vox VBX 431. (three 12-inch LPs in each volume).

Here's the best way in the world to place the complete piano works of Brahms at your fingertips in fine performances, with complete notes and very good sound, for a total of less than $20 retail.

All of the pieces are here: The three large sonatas, the schmaltzy waltzes, the introspective ballads, the delightful intermezzi, the variations on themes of Schumann and Paganini. There is a good deal of color and drama in these pieces.

If the pianist delivered them in an unimaginative style, listening would become extremely tiresome after a couple sides, but Klien succeeds in keeping interest high.

DEBUSSY: COMPLETE PIANO MUSIC, Volume I, Peter Frankl, pianist — Vox VBX (three 12-inch LPs).

These performances must of course be immediately checked against those of the so-far definitive Debussy pianist, the late Walter Gieseking. Well, Frankl stands up very well against Gieseking. Considering the excellent tone quality and quiet surfaces of these discs, and the lousy sound of the Gieseking recordings, I think I'll be listening to these versions frequently in the future.

"Estampes," "Suite Bergamasque," "Children's Corner," "Pour le Piano," the first books of the "Preludes" and "Images," and assorted short pieces are included in this first volume of Debussy works. Again, the bargain price of about $10 is a primary attraction of this new release.

A Home High In The Hills

Bettini House Designed For Family Living

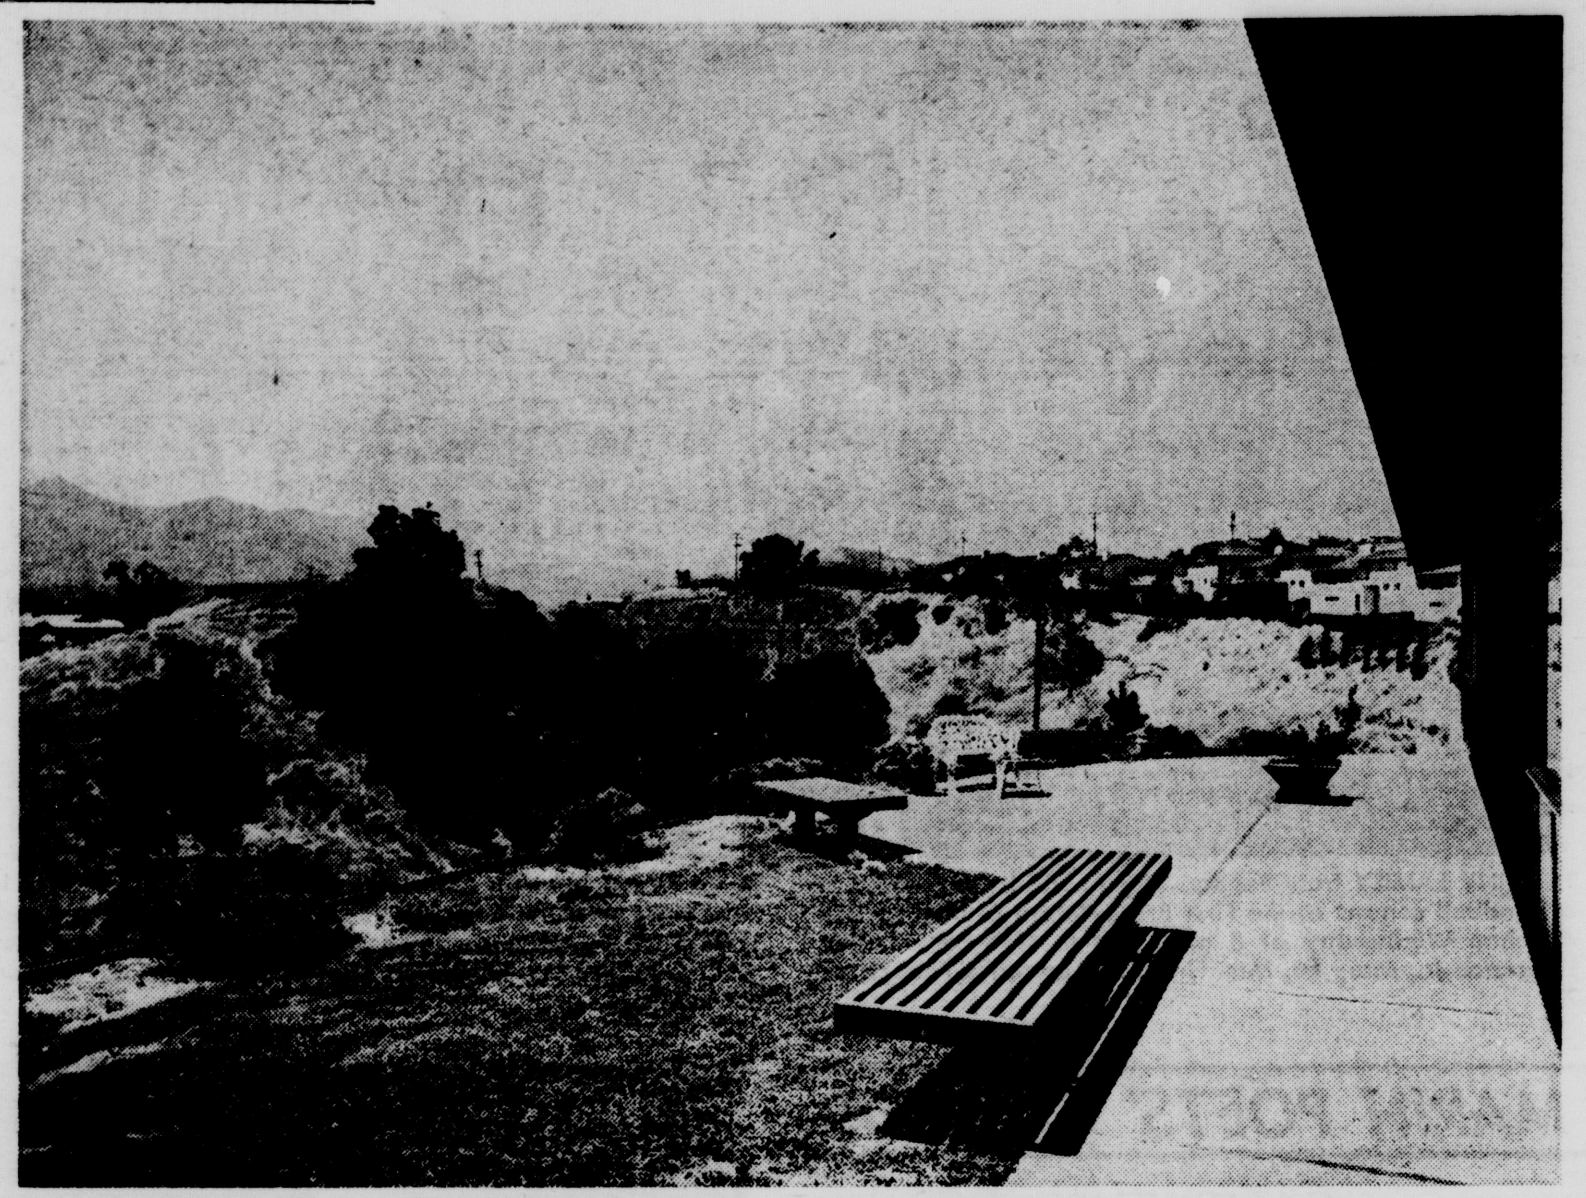
High in the hills of Fairhills in San Rafael is a family home designed for family life, entertaining and its detached secluded setting.

It is the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bettini of 130 Valley View.

SOME two years ago the Bettinis approached the William H. McDevitt Co. of San Rafael about building their new home under McDevitt's one-stop package plan whereby the firm takes all responsibility for site engineering, architectural design, color coordinating and construction and landscaping.

The Bettinis told the McDevitt firm of their family needs, stressing that the house must be comfortable and be designed around a family center with adjoining kitchen since the Bettinis have three young children.

McDevitt came up with a free-flowing plan to which, Mrs. Bettini says, "We made only minor changes . . . The plan suited us perfectly."



THE WIDE OPEN SPACES that still exist in Marin are evident in this view from the terrace of the hilltop home of the Emil Bettinis in Fairhills, San Rafael. The attractive terrace is perfect for outdoor entertaining. A private view playground has been provided for the Bettini children adjoining the terrace. William H. McDevitt Co. of San Rafael was the builder and also handled the designing, engineering and landscaping. (Photos by Ken Molino)

BOARD and batten has been used on the exterior. It is stained a soft beige. The fascia is brown with brown amber bottle glass window walls.

TO THE LEFT is a generous kitchen separated from the family room with an eating bar. McDevitt has used yellow formica, golden oak stained wood cabinets, matching yellow electric stove, oven and refrigerator and maintenance free Tessera corlon floors which extend into the family room. It has a floor to ceiling used brick fireplace and ample space for double sofas and large informal dining table.

Off the family room is a really huge utility room and half bath. Adjoining is a two-car garage.

To the right of the entry is a separate formal dining room and a pleasant formal living area which leads to a large terrace overlooking the mountains. A bookcase wall and used brick fireplace fit in well with the French provincial furniture which is keyed to aqua, brown and gold tones.

THE BEDROOM hall is separated from the living room by a divider and leads to three bedrooms and a family bath with double lavatories in pleasing yellow mosaic.

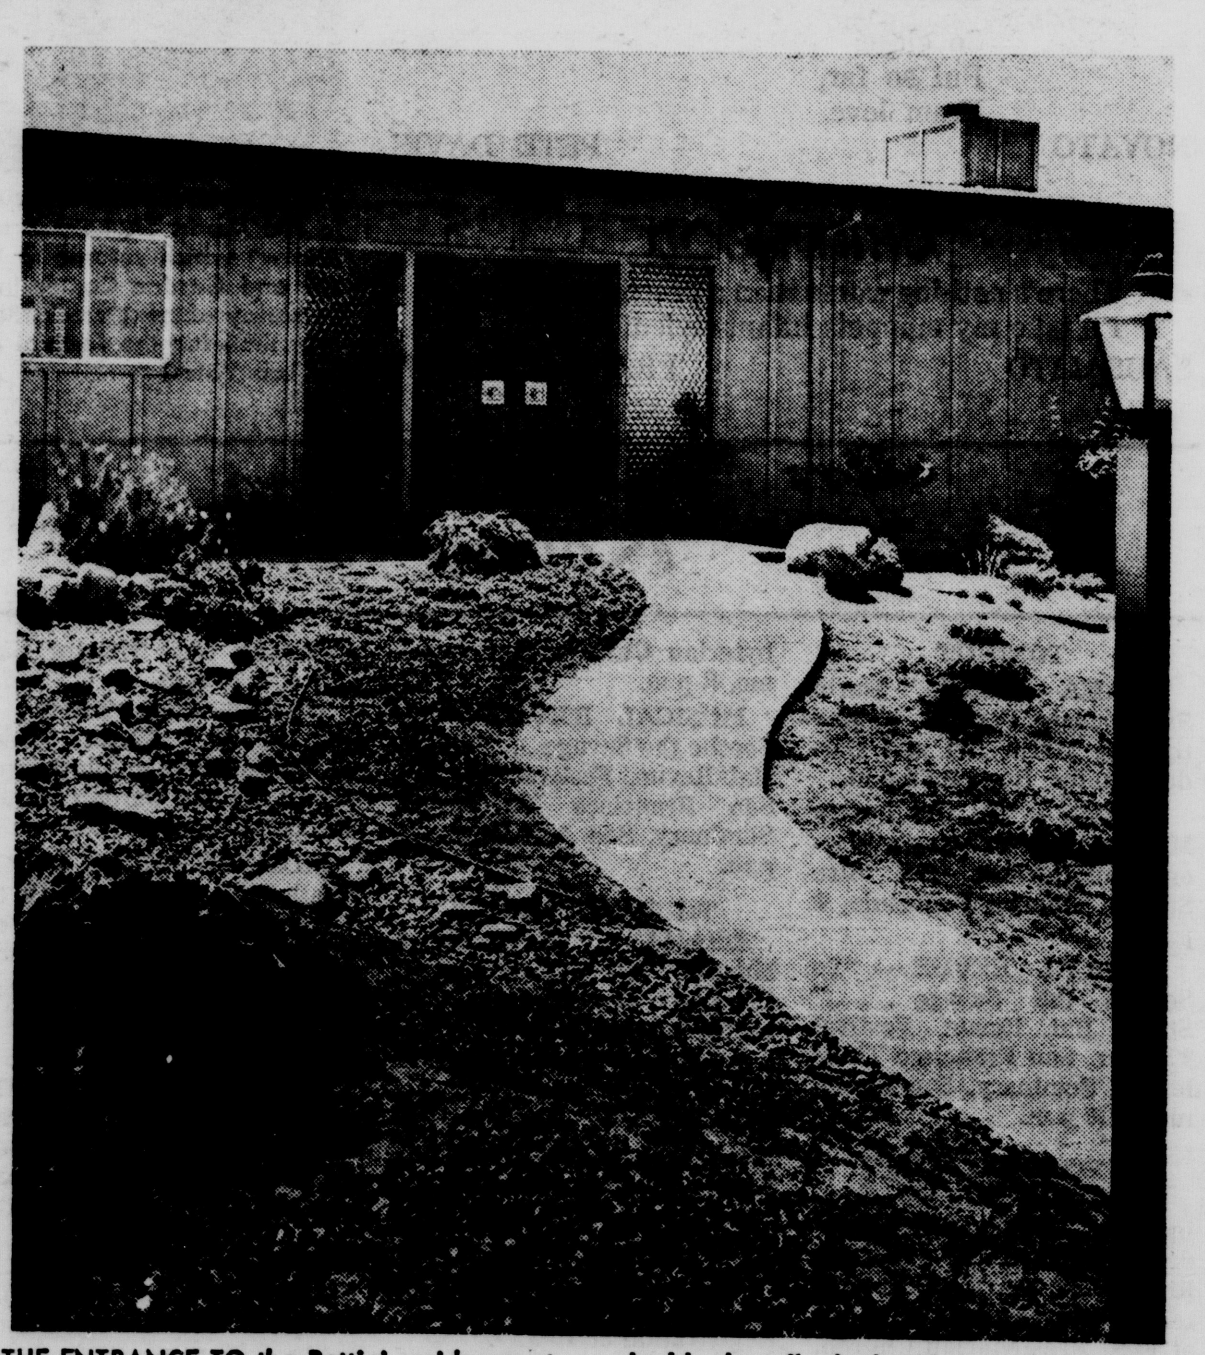
The children's rooms are functional. The boys' rooms have maple furnishings and the young lady of the house still uses crib furniture.

The master bedroom is dramatic, not only from its awe-inspiring view, but because of the interesting mauve tones Mrs. Bettini has chosen in velvet lady chairs and in the mauve and rose quilted spread. The large master bath and dressing area is in rose mosaic.

BEST OF ALL is the large walk-in closet, really room-size, that McDevitt included in the plan.

The wall color throughout is a delicate mushroom tone matched with carpets to coordinate all rooms. Louvred shutters have been used freely on the windows to give a uniform appearance.

The Bettini family and their three children, Mark, 7, Chris, 5, and Carol, 2, are great boosters for their spectacular view home which satisfies all of their family needs.



THE ENTRANCE TO the Bettini residence at 130 Valley View, San Rafael, is pleasing because it winds its way to a gracious double-door flanked with interesting bottle glass. Landscaping is low in maintenance requirements, yet attractive.

"REALTY VIEWS"

"How fast can you sell a property?" Sid Caedler asked impatiently. "I've never been a good 'waiter'. If I decide to do something I want immediate action."

"A normal residence property will sell in 30 to 90 days," I replied, "sometimes sooner, sometimes later."

William A. Lewis

"Even 30 days is too long," Sid said. "I want to unload my home today."

Investigation revealed that Sid's house was of an unusual design — the kind that are usually hard to sell; also, that Sid and his wife were breaking up their marriage, and Sid wanted to move 1,000 miles away (at once).

"If we hold this property until the right buyer appears, we can probably get the price you want for it," I said. "But if you insist on speed, I'd recommend some price appeal because of the odd design."

"I'd rather take less and move two months sooner," Sid said. "Pour it on."

At an attractive price, Sid's home sold quickly to the second person who looked at it. We hurried the closing along too. Sid had his money within two weeks!

"Well," Sid said as we were settling up, "I took $2,000 off the price I really wanted, but the sale took an even bigger load off my shoulders!"

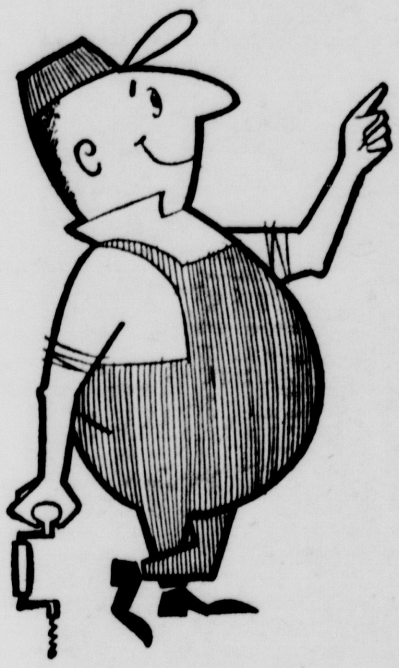
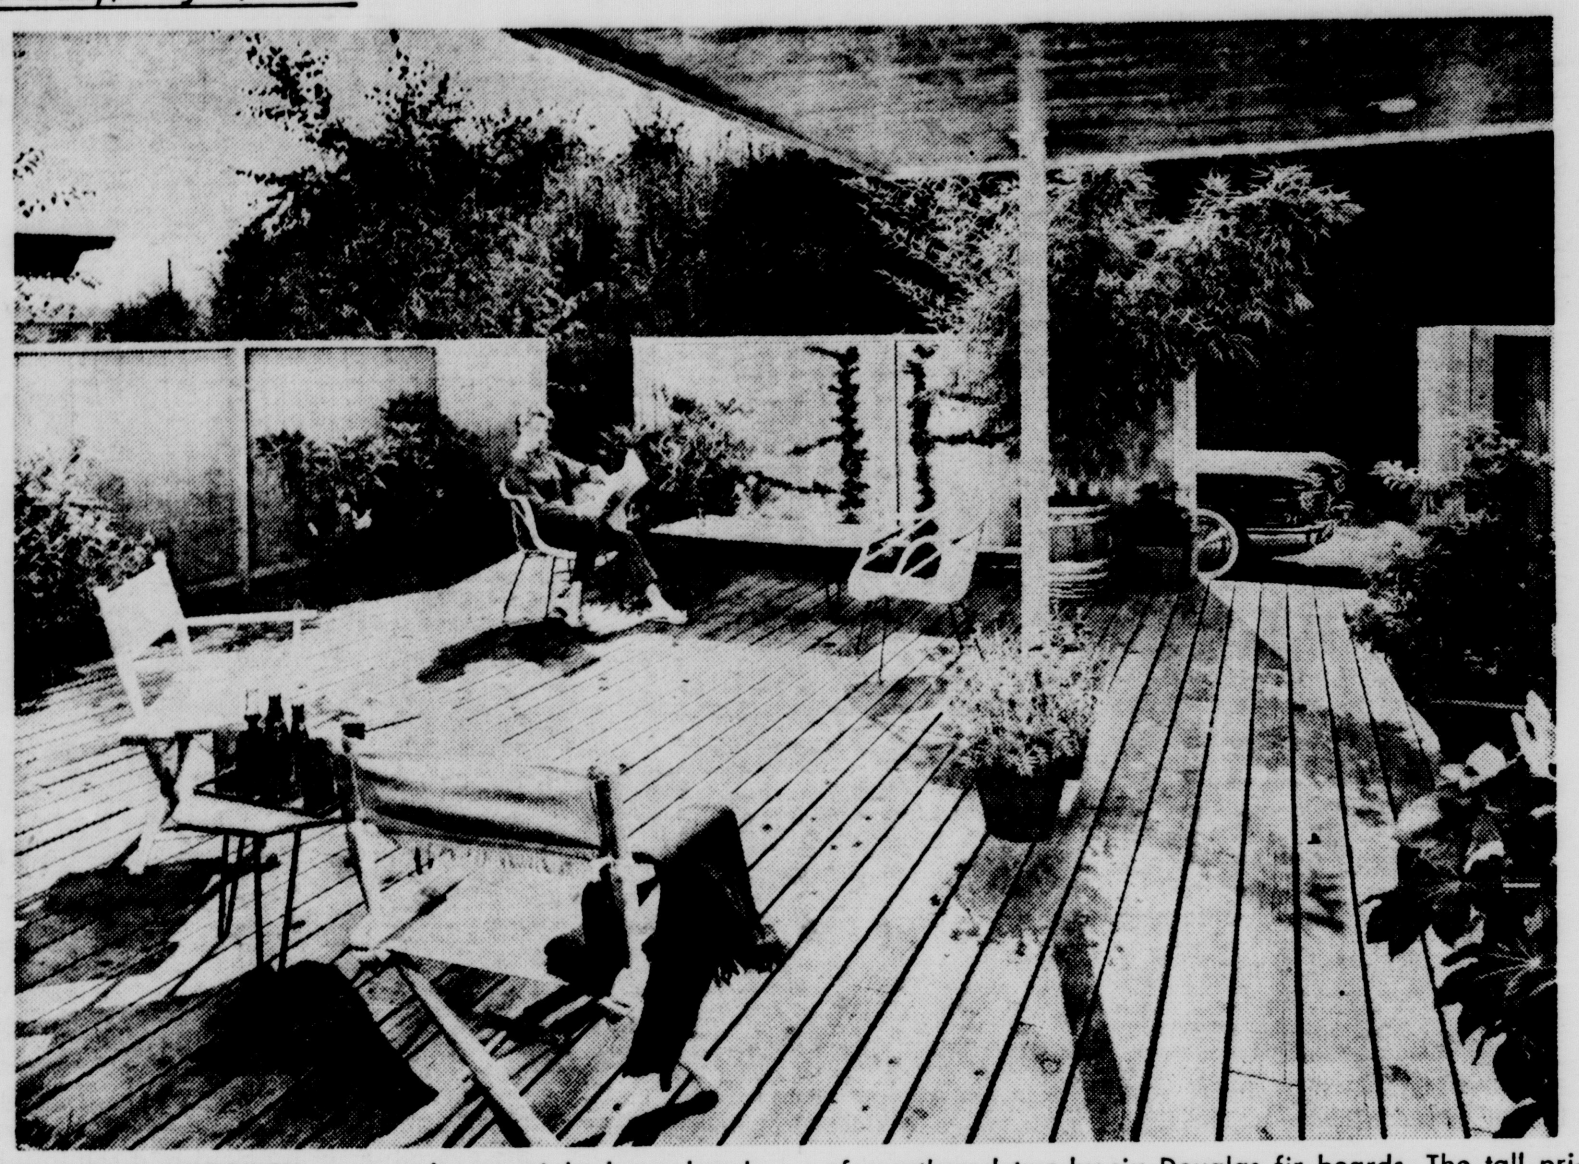
Handyman's Page





THE RIGHT APPROACH to your home might be a handsome wooden deck such as this one. It serves to level the grade between street and front door, and to provide a perfect and private spot for lounging. The deck is built of weathered two-by-six Douglas fir boards. The tall privacy windscreens are made from tongue-and-groove cedar siding in two-by-four frame. (West Coast Lumbermen's Assn. photo)

A Deck Is Also Entrance

One of the most exciting and newer ideas to come from an architect's drawing board is the use of a wood deck as an entrance yard.

But it does make an excellent transition zone between the exterior and the interior of the home. In addition, a wood entrance is a fine solution for the home located on the down side of a steep hill or in such a manner that back and side yards offer no living space.

Using a deck as an entrance yard offers no construction problems. The deck is built at the level of interior floors, or one step below, if desired.

The structural system is the same for this oversize deck as for one of more usual proportions. For such a large area, however, wider boards are preferable for appearance, and Douglas fir two-by-fours are often suggested.

Spacing for rain runoff between deck boards should be the minimum eighth-inch to permit high-heeled ladies to walk with ease and safety.

A DECKED ENTRANCE yard will be heavily traveled, so maintenance is a factor to keep in mind. Generally, it's best not to paint or stain the deck because of heavy foot wear. The better solution would be to allow the decking to weather naturally and acquire the soft silver patina of time and tempest.

One season will see the process well under way, and each successive year will add rich beauty to the wood.

For the sake of eye interest as well as privacy from the street, it's smart to convert the entrance deck to a courtyard with perimeter walls. These can be head-height or tall enough to match the height of house walls.

FOR STYLE, use the same siding lumber and patterns as used for the house. It can be set within conventional fence frames and painted or stained to match the house.

Blending The Indoors With The Outdoors

What's the easiest way to blend indoors and outdoors in homes with large areas of glass?

A simple way, says an outstanding architect, is to bring the wood siding of the exterior into the home as a wall paneling.

This is especially effective when the wood has a saw texture. The most widely used exterior siding is either western red cedar or Douglas fir and both of these woods have a fine beauty of grain and texture which add immeasurably to the decor of any room.

THIS GUN RACK not only offers a safe repository for the sportsman's weapons, but it also adds to the decorative appeal of a playroom, den or bedroom. Made of clear pine, it can be adapted to fit guns of any size. For the pattern, write Independent-Journal, P. O. Box 215, Pleasantville, N.Y., asking for Wall Gun Rack Pattern No. 574 and inclosing 50 cents.

A Project For The Sportsman

An easy-to-build gun rack appeals to everyone who recognizes the logic in using sports equipment to decorate a playroom, den or bedroom.

Besides adding a colorful masculine effect, this type of rack offers a safe repository for what the law frequently refers to as "an attractive nuisance."

Keeping guns safely out of the hands of small fry not only saves lives and protects equipment, but also creates a way of decorating a room that has considerable appeal.

Only a few hours of spare time and a few feet of clear pine is required to build the rack illustrated here. The full-size pattern simplifies building, since each component part is reproduced.

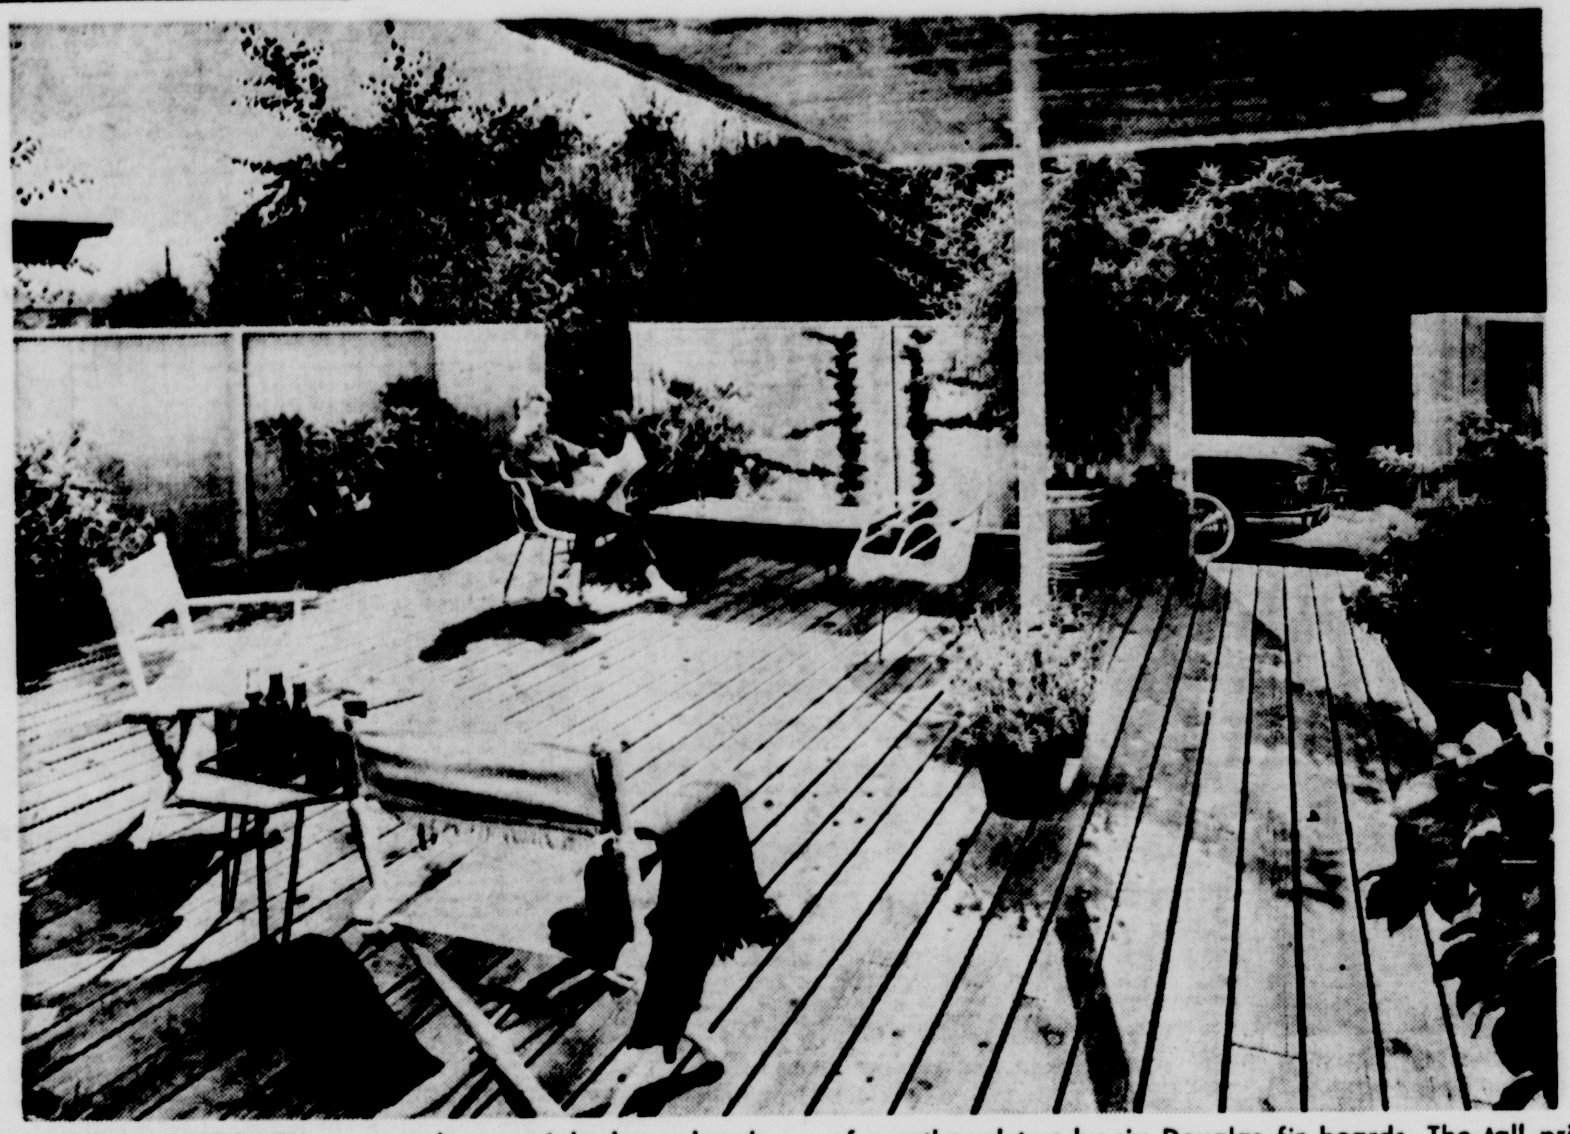
A Deck Is Also Entrance



THE RIGHT APPROACH to your home might be a handsome wooden deck such as this one. It serves to level the grade between street and front door, and to provide a perfect and private spot for lounging. The deck is built of weathered two-by-six Douglas fir boards. The tall privacy windscreens are made from tongue-and-groove cedar siding in two-by-four frame. (West Coast Lumbermen's Assn. photo)

One of the most exciting and newer ideas to come from an architect's drawing board is the use of a wood deck as an entrance yard.

Sound kookie? Perhaps, at first thought.

But it does make an excellent transition zone between the exterior and the interior of the home. In addition, a wood entrance is a fine solution for the home located on the down side of a steep hill or in such a manner that back and side yards offer no living space.

Using a deck as an entrance yard offers no construction problems. The deck is built at the level of interior floors, or one step below, if desired.

The structural system is the same for this oversize deck as for one of more usual proportions. For such a large area, however, wider boards are preferable for appearance, and Douglas fir two-by-fours are often suggested.

Spacing for rain runoff between deck boards should be the minimum eighth-inch to permit high-heeled ladies to walk with ease and safety.

A DECKED ENTRANCE yard will be heavily traveled, so maintenance is a factor to keep in mind. Generally, it's best not to paint or stain the deck because of heavy foot wear. The better solution would be to allow the decking to weather naturally and acquire the soft silver patina of time and tempest.

Tiny, But A Big Problem

Frequent inspections and spraying as needed is the surest method of keeping plants free of spider mites during the summer.

These pests may be found on a wide variety of shade trees, shrubs and lesser plants, but are most common on such evergreens as juniper, yew and spruce. They feed by sucking sap from leaf tissues. This loss of moisture and nutrients causes the leaves to turn yellowish in color, die and drop.

An evergreen shrub that is heavily infested with spider mites has a pale, sickly appearance, and when a branch is shaken a shower of needles fall. Foliage is sparse or lacking on the inner twigs and branches.

Spider mites are so tiny and inconspicuous that they cannot be seen as they feed. To test for their presence, hold a sheet of white paper beneath a cluster of needles and tap the branch. If mites are present they will drop and may be seen as they move about over the paper.

Even when only a few mites are found, control measures should be applied. Recommended materials include Kelthane, Dimite, Aramite and others that are specific for mite control. On the container label you will find directions for use; these should be followed exactly.

FOR SUMMER COOLNESS Bring Refreshing Water Into The Garden

Do you ever long for the refreshing presence of water in the garden? Especially running water?

Few things can add more to the illusion of coolness on a hot summer day. And few things are more relaxing on a summer evening than to hear the trickle of a garden fountain or a "stream" nearby.

With only a little effort and a modest bit of financing, these dreams can become a reality. Nurseries and stores distribute a variety of pools and small circulating pumps which can be installed easily and inexpensively in the garden setting. They range in style from small plastic bowls to large, pre-cast concrete pools.

THE BEAUTY of these prefab pools lies in their flexibility. They can be installed anywhere in the garden, including a deck. And they can even be used in a lanai.

Your nurseryman will suggest possible arrangements when more than one "pool" is used so that the water runs off from one to the other before being pumped back to the top to start all over again.

When water on a larger scale is desired, a specially constructed pool will be necessary. This gives you the ultimate of pool pleasure in a garden and while the cost is more than with ready-made pools, the permanent enjoyment is greater, too. Here again a nurseryman—or a landscaping architect—can help you with the plans first by visiting your garden and suggesting the preferred location for a pool, then by helping you with the design.

THIS LATTER is all important, for the proper planting helps to enhance the feeling of coolness which a pool conveys. Improper planting can make the pool seem out of place. The plants will have no apparent relation to the water and the pool, in turn, has no apparent relation to its surroundings.

One of the first that comes to mind is the Paper Reed family. These reed like plants look as though they might grow naturally on the banks of the Nile and, indeed, they would look unnatural without having water at their feet. Nurserymen offer several of them including the tall growing variety which carries the family name—a thatch topped reed of some six feet in height.

Another family of plants which has an affinity for water is the Daylily family. These one-time commoners, have undergone many changes for the better in recent years. Today's gardener has a wide variety of colors to choose from when he buys Daylilies, and as for bloom, they are almost always in bloom during the warm months, which is when we appreciate their presence by a pool. Plant them right at the margin of a pool, so both the blooms and the grass-like foliage will arch over the water.

Bearded Iris are not bog plants by any means, but you can plant them on the upside of a pool, where their roots are not apt to stand in seeping water. There, in spring, their colorful flags will be reflected in the surface of the pool and in off seasons, their sword-like foliage will carry the interest.

OTHER IRIS should also be planted at pool's side, including the bulbous Dutch varieties and the Japanese Iris.

For creeping plants, you can hardly do wrong with Carpet Bugle, a moisture loving ground cover which will rim the edge of your pool, sending up small spikes of blue flowers through almost half the year. Among the annuals, you will find the versatile lobelia happy at water's edge, producing a mounding cover of tiny blue flowers through the summer months and into fall.

There are many others, including the Calla lilies, which any nurseryman can show you. The above give you a good start, and you can take it from there.

LAST WEEK on this page we discussed espaliers as space-savers in your yard and garden. Here an evergreen magnolia, one of our largest trees, has been given such treatment. Flattened out against a wall, it takes up very little space. Fruit trees, camellias, evergreen pears, citrus, pyracantha are just some of the many other plants which can be sucecssfully espaliered. You can purchase them already started at your nursery, or you can "do it yourself." (Photo by California Assn. of Nurserymen)

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✔Lift spring-blooming bulbs when the foliage has died back. Store the bulbs until September or October, then plant them again.

✔Tuberous begonias sometimes drop their buds because they don't get enough air circulation or they get too much shade. Begonias like high shade and air circulation.

THREE INTERNS at New York's Bellevue Hospital were filmed treating an accident case in this scene from the dramatic documentary "Emergency Ward," which will be repeated on "DuPont Show of the Week" Sunday at 10 p.m. over KRON-TV. It is the story of one young intern's actual experiences in the busy hospital. Dana Andrews narrates.

A SPECIAL TREAT will be in store for the Irish on the "Hootenanny" program tonight as, left to right, Tommy Maken and the Clancy Brothers, Pat, Tom and Liam, sing "Bold O'Donohue" and "Port Larrege." The repeat show from the George Washington University campus will also feature the Limeliters, Bob Gibson and Lynn Gold.
